U. S. Faces Crisis Over Greek Civil War As Britain Pleads She Must Halt Aid

President Backs Clapp Despite Vote Of Senators

Truman Ready For Finish Fight to Force Confirmation Of TVA Nominee

By Dillard Stokes

President Truman last night said he would fight to the finish for Gordon B. Clapp, who was turned down for TVA chairman by a 7-to-5 vote of the Senate Public Works Committee yesterday.

Mr. Truman said he was backing up Clapp just as he was David E. Lilienthal, his choice for chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission. And Democratic Senators promised a stubborn battle on the floor to overturn the report against the Administration nominee.

But the fight for—and against—Clapp and Lilienthal was more than party line scrambling for political pawns. Those against them are fighting what they stand for, the Tennessee Valley Authority, where Lilienthal was chairman until a few months ago and Clapp—whom the President named to take his place—is general manager.

Party Lines Split
Three Democrats helped four Republicans beat Clapp on the Public Works Committee. Three Republicans and only two Democrats were for him. Here is how they voted:

To recommend confirmation: Chairman Beveridge (R., W. Va.) and Senators Cooper (R., Ky.), Watkins (R., Utah), Chavez (D., N. Mex.), and Downey (D., Calif.).

Against confirmation: Senators Cain (R., Wash.), Martin (R., Pa.), Williams (R., Del.), Malone (R., Nev.), Overton (D., La.), O'Daniel (D., Tex.), and McClellan (D., Ark.).

And here is what they said: "O'Daniel—I voted against him because I am doing everything I can to break up this New Deal gang."

Malone Gives View
Malone—"I voted against the philosophy of government as exemplified by TVA."

Cain—"Gordon Clapp is a very competent person. It is a question of policy. Here we were considering the nomination of Mr. Clapp to be chairman of the board of directors of the Tennessee Valley Authority. As such, he is unacceptable to me."

McClellan—"I would have preferred to wait until the Senate Atomic Committee acted upon Mr. Lilienthal's report to come first. Senator Hill (D., Ala.) said at once that, 'we ought to make every possible effort to get him confirmed, see CLAPP, Page 5, Column 5.'

Williams—"No comment." The committee's action came as a surprise; most people—like McClellan—were looking for the Lilienthal report to come first.

Senator Hill (D., Ala.) said at once that, "we ought to make every possible effort to get him confirmed, see CLAPP, Page 5, Column 5."

Light to Medium Snow Predicted For District Today
"A light to medium" snowfall was predicted for the Washington area today to herald the month of March.

A low pressure area, bringing on the snow, was centered yesterday in Texas and light snows were reported in Tennessee, north Georgia and northwestern South Carolina.

The forecaster said he expected the ground to be well covered. Snowy looking clouds began accumulating late yesterday and much of today is expected to remain cloudy. A 28-degree low temperature was expected for this morning. Yesterday's high was 37 at 2 p. m.

2 Killed in Trial Run Of Coast Guard Vessel
New York, Feb. 28 (AP)—The Coast Guard said tonight two men were killed, and several others critically injured when the main engine of the motor vessel Ben Froemming exploded while on a trial run near Oak Point, Miss.

The Coast Guard said it was coordinating efforts with the Army and Navy to round up all available doctors and rush them to the scene in crash boats. The exact number injured was not determined immediately.

Newspaperman Victim of Japs Dies Here After Luncheon Talk

Shortly before he collapsed and died, John B. Powell (left) was pictured at yesterday's University of Missouri luncheon chatting with Clark Nichols, president of the Washington alumni.

J. B. Powell met his last deadline here yesterday—a final, ringing challenge to keep America's defenses strong.

The 60-year-old crusading editor of The China Weekly Review collapsed and died before a luncheon audience at the Sheraton Hotel at 2:15 p. m.—a victim of the Japanese aggression he had dared for years to forecast.

The cruelty of the notorious Japanese Bridgehouse Prison in Shanghai robbed him of both feet. He stood on crutches and artificial feet yesterday afternoon before 71 members of the University of Missouri Alumni Association.

For 37 minutes he sounded a plea for recognition of the "supreme importance of Asiatic developments."

He pleaded noticeably in the last stages of his address and was perspiring freely as he sat down near his wife to the applause of his audience.

His collapse was tragic punctuation to Association President Clark Nichols' comment to the audience that he was glad to see "Mr. Powell in such..."

"...the word was to have been 'health.'"

Powell, a slight, mild-mannered Missourian from Hannibal and an alumnus of the university, was frequently jovial in his luncheon remarks. "I am," he said to a friend sitting near him, "a fugitive from Walter Reed Hospital."

He had been under treatment at the hospital since last October 26. Trope ulcers which developed on his feet after he had spent most of the first year's winter in an unheated prison cell, cost him one foot and part of another. The remaining part of the foot probably would have been amputated, Walter Reed doctors said.

Defied Japs for Years
An editor in China for 25 years, Powell sent up warning flares of Japanese intentions years before Pearl Harbor.

The Japanese made persistent efforts to silence him and throttle his newspapers, the China Weekly Review and the China Press. As early as 1934 the Manchukuo government refused him a visa for entry at Dairen on the grounds that his newspapers were spreading "anti-Manchukuo propaganda."

His defiance and continued warnings of Japan's moves tagged him as that country's "Public Enemy."

Senate Votes Debt Slash Of 3.6 Billion

Surprise Maneuver By Democrats Sets Higher Figure Than Republicans Planned

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate yesterday delayed until Monday its final decision on budget ceilings after voting to earmark more than $3,600,000,000 of any 1948 surplus for retirement of the national debt.

The unexpected increase in debt payment earmarkings came in a surprise Democratic parliamentary maneuver that caught Republicans off guard.

GOP leaders, worried lest the action knock out tax reduction plans, recessed the Senate to weigh the effect of the upset. Votes will be mustered over the weekend in an effort to limit debt retirement to a compromise $2,600,000,000.

The $2,600,000,000 debt retirement figure was already agreed to by an 82-10 vote in the Senate, when a GOP move to earmark all receipts from surplus property sales boomeranged.

Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry (Nebr.) proposed the use of the money recaptured from war assets for debt purposes. He said he intended it to be counted as part of the $2,600,000,000 set aside for the debt.

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), however, feared it would add more than $200 million to the debt to the amount already earmarked for the debt.

To make sure it would not, Taft offered an amendment counting surplus goods receipts "as part" of the original earmarking.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (D., Md.), with the backing of nearly all Democratic Senators, upset the play by moving to strike out the Taft amendment.

Taylor's Vote Counts
The Senate first tied, 38 to 38, on the Tydings move, and a recapitulation was ordered. Senator Glen H. Taylor (D., Idaho) rushed in late. Senate President Pro Tempore Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.), in the chair, ruled he could vote. On the recount, the Taft amendment was knocked out, 39 to 38.

Surprising Republicans for the first time this session without enough organization votes on the floor, Democrats then proceeded to reauthorization of the vote by another 40 to 38 roll call.

That's when Senate Republican Leader Wallace White (Me.) ordered the recess for weekend stock-taking.

Exactly how much the maneuver increased the amount set aside for the debt was unclear, but Wherry said money from war assets sales in the next fiscal year would amount to $1,980,000,000, and in the following year, to $1,090,000,000.

Taft, however, estimated the World Bank Elects McCloy To Presidency

By Marshall Andrews

John J. McCloy, lawyer, industrialist and wartime Assistant Secretary of War, yesterday was elected president of the 40-Nation World Bank to take office March 17.

Immediately upon his election by the board of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, McCloy announced appointment of Robert L. Garner of New York as vice president. President Truman meanwhile sent to the Senate the nomination of Eugene Black, Jr., of New York, to replace Emilio G. Collado as United States director.

McCloy's election fills a vacancy which has existed since resignation December 4, 1946, of Eugene Meyer, owner of The Washington Post and the bank's first president. The post of vice president has been vacant since the death of Harold D. Smith on January 24.

Meyer said yesterday he considered the bank "extremely fortunate" in its selection of McCloy and predicted he would prove "an admirable leader" in the bank's task of assisting in world reconstruction.

Truman Opens National Drive Of Red Cross

Organization Must Stay Strong, President Says: Goal Is 60 Millions

President Truman last night launched the national Red Cross Fund campaign with an appeal to keep the Red Cross "at full strength."

In a radio address, the President declared, "Let us remind ourselves that many times a year the people turn to the Red Cross—once a year the Red Cross turns to the people. That time is now at hand."

National goal in the campaign, which starts today and continues through March 31, is 60 million dollars. Quota for the Washington metropolitan area is $787,500.

Text of President Truman's Red Cross message:

My fellow citizens: Recently there came to my desk a small pamphlet with a four-word title, "This Is Our Story." I opened it and found inside one of the really great stories of our time. Its pages unfolded a simple and moving story of the American Red Cross, geared now to peacetime requirements, yet remaining at the side of our occupation troops and in hospital wards with our servicemen and veterans.

The far-reaching work of the Red Cross is, indeed, our story. It is a story in which all of us can take deep pride. For we the people have built the Red Cross—an organization which translates dollars into helpful deeds, which transcends all barriers of race, color, and creed.

A certificate from Dr. H. Garnett Sneed, 902 Hillwood ave., Falls Church, explained Mrs. Durant's absence from court yesterday. It declared:

"This is to certify that Mrs. James Durant has been ill and under my care since February 27. I saw her at 8:15 a. m. today (Thursday) and have recommended that she remain in bed."

Dr. Sneed declared that she was suffering from "mental strain bordering on hysteria" as well as "contusions of the left hip and leg" suffered in a fall.

Handwriting On Jar Enters Durant Trial

FBI Expert Says Figures Consistent With Other Scrawls In Hesse Gem Case

By Robert Bruskin

Scrawled numbers found in a jar containing $28,000 near Falls Church, Va., are "consistent with" handwriting specimens of Col. Jack W. Durant, an FBI expert testified yesterday.

Five money wrappers, each marked $5000, were admitted as evidence at the Pentagon court-martial of Colonel Durant, who is accused of taking the Hesse crown jewels.

Charles A. Appel, Jr., 3383 Stephenson pl. n.w., chief of the FBI handwriting laboratory, testified there was enough handwriting on the wrappers to make positive identification, but that comparisons with other figures written by Durant indicated they were from the same person.

A sixth wrapper was not admitted. Figures on that were written by another person, Appel said. The original $5000 had been scratched over. As the bills were withdrawn, the figure had been reduced accordingly.

Mrs. James E. Durant, sister-in-law of the Colonel and wife of a Falls Church councilman, was given until Monday morning to appear at the trial. She walked out during her testimony Wednesday after declaring she felt ill. The next day, her husband said she was injured in a fall at her home.

Major Joseph S. Robinson, trial judge advocate, said he had been in touch with her physician.

Given Until Monday
"We have no desire to inflict hardship on her if she is too ill to appear," said Robinson. "We'll give her until Monday to recover from her fall downstairs and her illness. After that, we'll take action to bring her to the court-martial."

Mrs. Durant's attorney testified earlier that Robinson caused her to become ill when he told her before the hearing that her husband "has permanently lost his job and will be prosecuted by the Government."

[James Durant has been suspended from his job at the General Accounting Office.]

The attorney, Frank L. Ball, Jr., 433 N. Park dr., Arlington, said he believed that Robinson's comment brought on "hysteria" and "caused her (Mrs. Durant) to suffer a fall at her home."

Denies Accusation
Robinson, a seasoned Judge Advocate with long civil experience in New York City courts, vigorously denied the accusation. Ball declared "we are prepared to prove it."

A certificate from Dr. H. Garnett Sneed, 902 Hillwood ave., Falls Church, explained Mrs. Durant's absence from court yesterday. It declared:

Three Hurt In Naval Air Station Fire

Fire, caused by static electricity, swept through the boat house at the Naval Air Station at Patuxent River, Md., early yesterday afternoon injuring three men and destroying $150,000 worth of property.

Three small craft and the boat house where they were docked went up in flames at 2:15 p. m. when one of the ships which was being refueled, caught fire and spread to the other two craft and the building.

It is estimated that more than three fourths of the boat house is a total loss. The fire department on the station battled the blaze until 5:30 p. m. before extinguishing it.

Capt. A. B. Vassler, USN, commanding officer of the air station, immediately convened a board of investigation, headed by Lieut. Comdr. Kirby, security and intelligence officer of the station.

Reported injured in battling the flames were: W. C. Peterman, s. l. c. lacerated head; J. C. Phillips, mm l. c. "first-degree burns about hands, and J. D. Fisher, s. l. c. slight head wounds. None were in a serious condition, it was reported.

Britain, France To Sign 50-Yr. Pact Tuesday

Historic Document To Be Approved at Dunkerque Ceremony

London, Feb. 28 (AP)—The Foreign Ministers of Britain and France announced to their approving Parliaments today that a 50-year treaty of alliance between the two countries would be signed on Tuesday at the historic French Channel port of Dunkerque.

France and Britain already have treaties of mutual assistance with Russia. Both documents are aimed especially at Germany, but express agreement also on cooperation for the security and economic betterment of Europe.

Announcement of a third pact, completing a ring around Germany, was greeted with cheers in both Commons and the French National Assembly.

Neither British Foreign Secretary, Bevin nor French Minister Bidauld elaborated on terms of the treaty, but Paris informants, however, said it was known to provide for close political and economic collaboration between France and Britain and recognition by Britain of France's claim to a large portion of the Ruhr Valley coal output.

The Paris informants said military clauses in the treaty provide for swift joint action to suppress any threat of future German aggression.

The pact will probably be known as "the Treaty of Dunkerque." Bevin and Bidauld will meet at Dunkerque for the formal signing at 4 p. m. (10 a. m. Eastern standard time) on Tuesday.

Bidauld told the National Assembly that Germany was the key to the solution of the world's problems.

"If we can agree on Germany we will agree on everything, but if we do not agree on Germany then God take pity on mankind," he said.

Red-Directed Rebels Peril Middle East, Balkan Peace

Truman, Marshall Silent After Parley With Leaders Here On London Appeal

By Edward T. Folliard

The United States is confronted with one of the gravest problems in its diplomatic history—whether to go to the rescue of Greece and give her the financial help that a desperate Britain says she no longer is able to afford.

American observers on the scene in Greece have reported on what may happen if the United States fails to act.

A weakened Greek government, they say, would mean civil war, with the prospect of a victory by Communist-led guerrillas.

That in turn would mean a puncture of the "democratic frontier" in Europe; it would also mean the flanking of the Dardanelles and Turkey by a Russian-dominated Greece.

Moreover, the American observers report, it might pave the way for the expansion of Russian influence all the way across the Middle East to the frontiers of India.

Britain, now staggering under a dangerous economic crisis, informed the United States Government in a note several days ago that she would have to halt her financial aid to Greece on March 31. She did not make clear what she would do about British troops in Greece.

The note had a bombshell effect at the State Department and the White House. President Truman and Secretary of State Marshall, apparently, were not prepared for the blow. They suddenly found themselves faced with a problem that, from the standpoint of urgency, overshadowed the Four Power Conference in Moscow and the writing of peace treaties with Germany and Austria.

Pledged to Secrecy
A solemn and highly secret meeting at the White House followed on Thursday. Mr. Truman called in Secretary Marshall and Undersecretary Dean Acheson. He

Hoover Asks Relief Be on Loan Basis

CAB Rules Pilot, Airline Blamed for Fatal Crash

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday attributed the Viking Air Transport crash at Richmond, Va., last May 16, in which 27 persons were killed, to negligence on the part of both the pilot and the company.

An unusually severe accident report pointed out that the Glendale, Calif., company was a non-scheduled air carrier, not certified by the CAB. It was conducting a charter flight from Newark, N. J., to the west coast of Florida at the time of the crash. There were no survivors.

The report said the "probable cause" of the crash, as bad as any in domestic air transport history, at the time, was the pilot's inability to maintain sufficient control of his plane to make an emergency approach under bad weather conditions.

The report said the pilot, William D. Anderson, had recently resigned from a scheduled airline after failing to pass flight tests for promotion to captain. He had been a copilot for 3½ years. The board said he had failed to pass tests involving control of planes in emergencies.

GREECE

also called in the Republican and Democratic leaders. As the conference broke up, all took a pledge of secrecy.

President Truman, at a White House news conference yesterday, was asked four times about the Greek crisis and about the hush-hush meeting in his office on Thursday. His answer each time was, "No comment."

A State Department spokesman admitted that a British note concerning Greece had been received, but that was all.

London Reports on Appeal

Meantime, however, there is the inevitable leaks. Lord Beaverbrook's London Evening Standard printed a dispatch from its New York correspondent, Frederick Cook, saying that Britain had appealed to the United States to "take over very soon" in Greece.

"As a result," Cook reported, "the President called a secret meeting of congressional leaders at the White House yesterday and, among other things, appealed to them to appropriate large sums immediately to save Greece from economic collapse."

"President Truman, Secretary of State Marshall and his deputy, Dean Acheson, told Congressmen that failure of the United States to assume the burden in Greece might jeopardize the efforts of the past year to reestablish the balance of power with the Soviet Union and Europe."

There is every reason to believe that President Truman, Secretary Marshall and the Nation's military and naval leaders are in favor of doing everything possible to prevent a collapse in Greece.

Congressional leaders, according to reports on the Hill, are of the same mind.

Economy May Balk Help

The fact is, however, that the rank and file in the Senate and House, not to mention the general public, are not yet familiar with the problem. No Congress in years has been so economy-minded, and a good case will have to be made by Administration and legislative leaders if funds are to be voted for Greece.

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Ore.), who was not at the White House meeting, said yesterday: "We are seeing the British Empire break up right before our eyes."

"We can no longer rely on Great Britain maintaining its tenuous degree of our world security throughout the world," Morse said, and added that Congress should inform the American people of the new role they will have to play in world affairs.

Investigate Rebel Training

The United States already is playing a large role in Greece. In addition to Ambassador Lincoln MacVeigh and the regular embassy staff, former OPA Administrator Paul Porter is on the scene, heading an economic mission. Mark Ethridge, publisher of the Louisville Courier Journal, also is in Greece. He heads a United Nations mission that is investigating reports that guerrillas, trained in Communist camps in Russian-dominated Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, have been keeping Greece in turmoil.

Secretary of State Marshall, in a statement earlier this month, called on King George's regime to put its house in order and said: "We all are deeply concerned with the welfare of Greece."

Won't Send United States Troops

The United States Government, if it does take over Britain's economic burden in Greece, would be expected to advance something like 250 million dollars for the remainder of this year. It would also be expected to supply the Greek government with arms, or the wherewithal to obtain arms. All this would mean, unquestionably, that a good-sized American mission would have to go into the country.

Other Qualifications Attached to Assist Needy in 6 Countries

Herbert Hoover advised Congress yesterday to attach a "please repay" tag and a number of other qualifications to a proposed $50-million-dollar relief fund for China and five needy nations of Europe.

The former President also recommended, in a statement to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, that relief be withheld from countries exporting goods or cash to pay for reparations or arms.

Minister of the Heavy load American taxpayers already are bearing, Hoover cautioned: "It is in the interest not only of ourselves but of the whole world that we stop, look, and listen."

President Truman declined to comment on Hoover's recommendations to Congress on the ground he had not read them. But he said that the news conference was "preliminary."

Hoover's recommendations were based on what he found out on a three-week on-the-spot survey made in Europe at Mr. Truman's request.

Some Sentiment for Idea

The committee considered them during the day, and Chairman (R., N. J.) said there was some sentiment for following Hoover's advice to require countries getting financial aid to pay it back.

Hoover said: "In their miseries, the peoples abroad believe our possibilities of giving are unlimited."

"They do not realize that our taxes, Federal and local, are now—two years after the war—still taking 35 per cent of the national income."

For this reason, he said, "it is in the interest not only of ourselves but the whole world" that we make a careful study of future relief expenditures in Greece.

"We should bring governmental relief to an end as soon as possible," he said.

Representative Lawrence H. Smith (R., Wis.) raised questions about the advisability of shipping food into Soviet-dominated countries.

Hoover recommended that plenty of strings be attached to the cash, but said the suggestions were "moderate" rather than "strict or harsh."

And he said American help to hungry and needy lands ought to be coordinated by a proposed "foreign relief administrator."

Among the conditions he said should accompany the $50 million dollars were these:

1. Relief should be limited to food, medicine, seed, fertilizer and perhaps some clothing supplies. The money should be spent only for American products and transportation.

2. Relief should be on a month-to-month basis so it could be halted at any time.

3. No country receiving assistance should be allowed to use relief food, or domestically produced food, to apply political pressure.

Hoover said recipient nations should obligate themselves to pay for the relief, either to the United States or other supplying countries or, preferably, to a projected United Nations famine relief fund.

The repayments could begin in two or three years, he suggested, and be financed by a 5 or 10 per cent tax on exports.

Nations asking reparations from relief countries should be asked to "defer collections" during the period of assistance, Hoover said. This would apply in some instances to Russia. The Soviets have claimed reparations both from Italy and Germany.

McNarney Warns U. S. Has No Girl Agents in Reich

Berlin, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Gen. Joseph McNarney, retiring commander of U. S. occupation forces in Germany, has warned his soldiers to beware of beautiful frauds posing as agents of the U. S. Army's Counterintelligence Corps, it was disclosed today.

Hearings Open on Legislation Creating Health Department

With its two senatorial sponsors and Mrs. Eugene Meyer testifying strongly in favor of enactment, hearings were opened yesterday on the Taft-Fullbright bill to establish a Department of Health, Education and Security.

Explaining that the initial hearing was "preliminary," Chairman George D. Aiken of the Senate Committee on Expenditures in Executive Departments asserted that a tremendous amount of interest in the proposed legislation has been manifested, indicating lengthy hearings when they are resumed.

The measure would add a secretary to the President's Cabinet with one undersecretary each for health, education and security. Among existing agencies which the department would absorb are United States Public Health Service, Food and Drug Administration, Freedmen's Hospital, Office of Education, Children's Bureau, Howard University and Columbia Institution for the Deaf.

Both Senators Taft and Fullbright emphasized that the department contemplated would not mean greater Federal centralization, but, rather, the opposite.

"It is not intended to dictate policies to the States on health, education and security matters," said Fullbright, "but to insure against scattering and duplication of effort. When the Federal Security Agency was formed, that was a step forward but a Cabinet organization is more responsible than an independent agency."

"Sometimes an independent agency becomes too independent of Congress."

In a stirring appeal for departmental status, unity, interrelated Federal activities which are now widely scattered, Mrs. Meyer said postwar problems "demonstrate that the need for this new Cabinet department is greater than ever."

The present teacher strikes, crime and delinquency, broken homes—these and other troubling aspects of the times have a bearing upon the bill under consideration, she asserted.

"The bill before you sounds theoretical because it is purely an administrative reform," said Mrs. Meyer. "All that it does is to raise the Federal Security Agency to Cabinet rank."

Watson B. Miller, administrator of the Federal Security Agency, attended the hearing but did not testify. Chairman Aiken said that Miller, as well as representatives of the American Medical Association, American Council on Education and numerous other agencies, will be heard at a later date.

Following the session, Aiken disclosed that within the last few days his committee has been flooded with letters and telegrams on the Taft-Fullbright bill "most of which are in favor."

Seated with her in the hearing room was Mrs. Wendell L. Wilkie, who listened attentively to the testimony.

British to Ease Power Ban On Monday

London, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Prime Minister Attlee, announced tonight that electric power would be restored Monday to nonessential industry in London and southeastern England, ending emergency industrial power cuts throughout the country.

Nonindustrial consumers will still be deprived of power for five hours a day, indefinitely, throughout Britain.

The chiefs of staff said fuel deficiencies still existed but improving weather, after the latest blizzard, makes it likely they will be overcome during the weekend.

Another document admitted by the court was one which led to the arrest of Colonel Durant and his bride, former Mrs. Kathleen Nash, who is now serving five years for complicity in the plot.

A handwritten telegram handed to a Western Union clerk at Hudson, N. Y., on May 29, 1946, was signed Kathleen B. Nash, but the FBI expert testified it had been written by Colonel Durant. The telegram, addressed to Fort Sheridan, Ill., and declared that Captain Nash did not desire return to active duty.

At that time, Army investigators had learned of the theft of the jewels from Kronberg Castle, Germany. They immediately began a search for every suspect. When they found Captain Nash was on terminal leave she was ordered to return so that the Army could retain control over her until all suspects had been investigated.

The Post was told yesterday that suspicion was immediately pointed at her when the telegram was received. Suspicion was heightened when it was discovered she had been married a day earlier to Colonel Durant. Both were arrested three days later in Chicago. Many of the jewels were found at her residence in Hudson.

The handwriting expert also identified a check indorsed by "Col. J. G. Gable" as being in the same script as that of Colonel Durant. The check was issued by the jewelry firm of Shah and Shah, 921 F. st. n.w., where two diamonds were sold. The court refused, however, to admit as evidence the second indorsement on the check, that of James E. Durant, the colonel's brother.

Although the prosecution has tried to establish that James Durant is a coconspirator, the court has consistently refused to permit any testimony up to now that might lead to such evidence.

Since James Durant is not on trial, the prosecutor has maintained that his wife can testify on her activities with the Hessians jewels.

China Orders Reds to Move By Wednesday

Nanking, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—The national government, charging the Communists with "open rebellion," ordered Communist delegations tonight to get out of government territory by Wednesday.

The Communists maintain liaison offices in Nanking, Shanghai and Chungking.

Committee Rejects President's Choice

McCloy Brings Long Study to World Bank

John J. McCloy, who returns to public life as head of the World Bank, has long been concerned with the economic structure to be built in a postwar world.

A year and a half ago, when he retired as Assistant Secretary of War, the stocky attorney said he was "a little terrified" at the prospect that America might slough off her responsibilities and pull out of Germany and Japan while those nations were still on a "soup kitchen economy."

Following an inspection trip he made to Europe and Asia, where he studied occupation problems, McCloy had urged in 1945 that the United States stand by until the economic systems of warring nations could be linked with the territory involved "on a basis of mutual prosperity."

McCloy, since his resignation from the assistant secretaryship in November 1945, has been engaged in the practice of law in New York. Amherst Graduate

A graduate of Amherst, cum laude, in 1916, McCloy entered military service and was commissioned in the Regular Army during World War I. He resigned his commission at war's end to return to school, and received a law degree from Harvard University in 1921.

He then engaged in the practice of law, and was sent to Paris in 1929 to take charge of a law office there. He remained until 1931 and during that time was active in the prosecution of claims against the German government for damage arising out of the Kingsland and Black Tom explosions.

His persistence in running down evidence of Germany's sabotage efforts during the United States prior to our entry in World War I resulted in the reopening of the case by the Mixed Claims Commission at The Hague.

Became Stimson's Aide

He left his law firm to become Special Assistant to Secretary Henry L. Stimson on December 7, 1940, and in April, 1941 became Assistant Secretary of War.

Upon McCloy's retirement in 1945, President Truman praised him for his part in the reorganization of the War Department, for cooperation with the Department of State, development of lend-lease, and for his part in framing regulations for military government in occupied countries.

McCloy was born in Philadelphia, on March 31, 1895. He is an ardent fisherman, an active member of the New York Anglers Club, and a skilled tennis player.

McCloy explained at a news conference late yesterday that he had declined the offer of the Bank's presidency, and then had accepted only when he was assured he could have about him people who could carry out the principles he believed necessary for proper operation of the Bank. These principles, he said, had been "confused with personalities," an occurrence he termed "most unfortunate."

"McCloy expressed the misunderstandings and difficulties created as a result of published reports of the terms under which I undertook this job."

"I believed it necessary," he said, "to have in the bank a knowledge of securities and their marketing. It is to be a going concern instead of merely distributing its own capital. I am not a banker and felt that I should have a sense of confidence, that I should have close to me people who were trained in banking and could fill in the gaps in my own knowledge."

So I chose Robert Garner, a trained banker, to be my vice president with all that implies."

Black Experienced in Securities

He pointed out that Black was "highly experienced" in marketing securities. It was "a good thing," he said, that a large part of the bank's funds were to be raised through the sale of securities to the public and added that the bank was "obligated to see those securities made good."

"I believe," he said, "that the structure of the bank is such that this can be done."

McCloy said Collado, whose resignation was sent to President Truman yesterday, would remain at the bank for an indefinite time "to assist his successor and to continue with some of the work he has been doing." Collado, said McCloy, "has performed a tremendous service" or the bank. He was in its earliest organization and has worked hard and long and the bank owes him a great debt." He said he did not know what plans Collado had after his temporary work with the bank was finished.

He did not accept the proposition, McCloy said, on the basis of any written agreement with the directors concerning his methods or policies. Nor did he accept the post on the basis of demands for radical action in its organization and the conduct of its business.

Organization Can Function

"I think the organization should be studied carefully," he said, "to see if it can be improved. I am convinced we've got a working organization now that can function. There is a disposition on the part of the board to cooperate closely with the staff."

He added that he "thinking of forming a marketing division in the bank to conduct the sale of its securities. He said he would resign from his Wall Street law firm and from "whatever banks I am connected with." His connection with several industrial concerns, he said, would be studied in connection with his new work.

British to Ease Power Ban On Monday

London, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Prime Minister Attlee, announced tonight that electric power would be restored Monday to nonessential industry in London and southeastern England, ending emergency industrial power cuts throughout the country.

Three Oysterboat Skippers Fined; Charges Against Crewmen Dismissed

Leonardtown, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—The skippers of three oyster boats from neighboring Charles County each paid $57 in fines and costs today on charges of taking small oysters after a night patrol in which a Tidewater Fisheries enforcement boat fired on two of the craft.

Charges against six of their crewmen were dismissed.

James G. Johnson, Richard H. Robertson and Paul Frederick, all of Rock Point, pleaded guilty to the small oyster charges. Frederick paid an additional $32 after pleading guilty to a charge of escaping arrest.

They appeared before Magistrate Ralph Abner today on charges preferred by Windsor Palmer, Fisheries Commission enforcement officer.

Palmer reported he took all three boats in tow after rounding them up in a night patrol in St. Mary's County waters off Koppell's Point in an estuary of the Potomac. He said he fired on two of the boats when they slipped the towline and made a run for a cove. The two skippers later appeared voluntarily and were released on bond.

Fire Laid to Arsonist

Baltimore, Feb. 28 (AP).—The nine-alarm May Co. fire was "beyond a doubt" the work of an experienced arsonist, Howard Travers, chief engineer of the Baltimore Fire Department, said yesterday.

"The job was done expertly," he said, "indicating that whoever was responsible for the starting of (five) separate blazes, and the failure of the sprinkler system and standpipes was experienced at that sort of thing."

The fire swept the department store's fifth floor Monday night.

Counterfeiter Fined

Baltimore, Feb. 28 (AP).—Taylor Williams, 30, of Frederick, was fined $200 and placed on probation for a year in Federal court today after admitting he had made counterfeit quarters when he "got sore" because he lost $300 playing slot machines.

The Army veteran, father of two children, told Federal Judge William C. Coleman he had manufactured 300 25-cent pieces.

He used the coins in slot machines at social and fraternal clubs in Frederick, Hagerstown, Westminster and Gettysburg, Williams testified.

Prosecutor Thomas G. Gray said one side of the quarters showed a picture of George Washington or the liberty head, but the reverse side was left blank.

B. & O., 120, Takes Bow

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—The Baltimore & Ohio, America's first commercial railroad, celebrated its 120th birthday today.

A group of Baltimore businessmen who feared the thriving trade of the city was being threatened by the new Erie Canal got the railroad charter from the Maryland General Assembly February 28, 1828.

When a celebration was held in Baltimore, July 24, 1828, to mark the start of construction of the new "rail road," President John Quincy Adams turned down an invitation so he could participate in a similar event staged by the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, long since abandoned.

The Legislature authorized the directors of the new railroad to issue five million dollars in stock for construction costs. When the railroad reached its objective at Wheeling 15 years later, the actual cost exceeded 15 million dollars. Today the railroad's investment is more than a billion dollars.

Fouled Up on Foul Bill

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—The Maryland State Senate got itself a little off-base from a parliamentary standpoint today on a foul bill which became something of a foul ball.

It all happened when House Bill 44 came up for what looked like routine passage. The bill as amended would permit to keep a grown and plucked game bird 90 days instead of 30-refrigerated, of course.

Senator Goldstein (D., Talbot) asked that the bill be explained during the roll call but was ruled out of order. Senator Phoebus (R., Somerset) voted against the bill because he wasn't sure of its meaning, which couldn't be explained during roll call.

Senator Barton (D., Baltimore Second), chairman of the Fish and Game Committee, later asked to explain the measure, asked "What bill?"

One Senator voted "present" instead of aye or no.

The whole matter was solved when Senator Della moved that the bill be made a special order of business for Monday at 8:45 p. m.

Correction

In a story printed in The Post of February 18 from Leonardtown, Md., James N. Lomax was erroneously listed as one of nine boatmen charged with illegal oystering on the Potomac. The charges were placed against Vernon Lomax, according to Trial Magazine J. Ralph Abell. The Post regrets the error.

Suit for Lost Honeymoon

Baltimore, Feb. 28 (AP).—A $75,000 damage suit on file in Superior Court today contends a young couple who suffered injuries in an automobile accident shortly after their marriage were deprived of "the sacred and priceless incident of marriage, namely a honeymoon."

Wallace Wiktorzak of Hamtramck, Mich., seeks $25,000 damages for facial injuries and loss of his bride's "society and consortium," after an accident in which their car collided with one operated by Julius Cohen of Baltimore.

Mrs. Wiktorzak seeks $50,000 for lost honeymoon and other damages.

Bill Banning Oyster Leases Drafted in Md.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 28 (AP).—Ten Senators strongly opposed to leasing of Chesapeake Bay oyster bars today answered the Tidewater Fisheries Commission—sponsors of the leasing plan—with a brief, simple bill.

The bill declared: "It shall be unlawful for the Department of Tidewater Fisheries or any other agency of the State to lease any natural oyster rock or bar in the Chesapeake Bay."

This was the reply to a measure introduced in the House Wednesday by Speaker Sybert (D., Howard) and Floor Leader Pumphrey (D., Prince Georges) which would permit the commission to lease bay bars to private interests for the purpose of rehabilitating the depleted rocky.

Watermen, here yesterday for a report to the Legislature last week, said that its efforts in seeding and rehabilitating the oyster beds had failed, principally due to lack of sufficient funds.

The commission urged the leases so that private capital could be used in restoring the rocks.

Monterey Fire Razes Court, 3 Buildings

Monterey, Va., Feb. 28 (AP).—A fire in a restaurant, picked up by high winds shortly after 10 p. m. today, destroyed three buildings and the 80-year-old county courthouse, and for a time threatened to raze this western Virginia town of 400 entirely before it was brought under control at 10 a. m.

The flames, fanned by winds, leveled the Hicklin Star Restaurant where they started, the Beverage Garage, the old Bishop store, which has been used in recent years by the Church of God as a place of worship. The wind shifted and the flames were flicked high across Spruce and Main sts. and caught the wooden cupola of the courthouse building.

Fire fed by lumber

Lumber stored in the attic of the courthouse fed the fire, and firefighters from the town and surrounding areas couldn't halt its progress downward.

An estimated 500, or a hundred more than the town's population, engaged in battling the flames. The villagers were assisted by citizens of nearby towns.

Only a shell of the brick and composition courthouse building was left standing, along with the white stone Roman columns of its facade. The county records, kept in an attached fireproof addition to the courthouse, were reported undamaged. Fire fighters went down the small jail building, also on the courthouse grounds, and it was undamaged.

Others threatened

At first it appeared the Monterey Bank, a service station and the residence of James Gibson were doomed when the fire started in the restaurant. However, the winds shifted and the buildings in the original path of the flames escaped barely scorched.

In the area of the restaurant, the garage and the Bishop store all that was left was a field of smoking rubble. Firemen continued to cool down the ashes after reporting the flames well under control and the town safe from further danger of destruction.

Fire-fighting equipment from Franklin, W. Va., 30 miles away, arrived on scene and joined in the fight to save the town's business area.

Monterey is on Route 250 in the Alleghany Mountains, 46 miles northwest of Staunton, 30 miles southwest of Franklin, W. Va., 36 miles north of Hot Springs and only a few miles due east of the West Virginia-Virginia border.

Prices Surge To New Peaks

by skyrocketing grain prices, the Associated Press commodity index of 35 weighted wholesale staples surged forward for the second consecutive day to a record peak.

The barometer today rose 175.92 from 174.87 on Thursday. A year ago the index stood at 113.6. The base year, 1926, is equal to 100.

In addition to record grain advances the rise in the index was stimulated by sizable increases in the prices of eggs, flour and hog. Linseed oil, lard and butter contributed moderate support. Hides and cotton showed the greatest losses.

Hoover Report Is Stimulus
Chicago, Feb. 28 (AP).—Led by wheat, which advanced the 10-cent limit for one day's trading in the March contract, all grains spiked sharply in heavy trading on the Board of Trade today.

A report by Herbert Hoover of food relief requirements in Germany set off the new price surge this morning.

Wheat reached $2.53 a bushel for March, the highest for as long as wheat future since 1920.

Corn was up about three cents to March $1.52, and oats two cents to March $0.94. Grain exports were

British Minister Wilkinson's Death Ruled Accidental

London, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—A coroner's verdict held today that Ellen Wilkinson, 55, Britain's late Education Minister, died accidentally February 6 from an overdose of drugs taken while she was so ill she did not know what she was doing.

The coroner said Miss Wilkinson had been suffering from bronchitis and pneumonia when the apparent accident caused her death three weeks ago. Barbiturate tablets were on a table beside her bed, he said.

Dr. W. D. W. Brooks, a specialist, said Miss Wilkinson showed no signs of depression prior to her death, and her brother, Harold, testified she never thought of suicide.

Miss Wilkinson was a tireless fighter for women's suffrage and workers' rights. Born in Ardwick, Manchester, she was the first woman to hold the Education post and the second woman cabinet member.

ANNAPOLIS

ate a State Water Pollution Commission. The Senate held up until Monday night a vote on a House bill to allow banks to close on Saturday in all but a selected list of rural counties.

Breakdown of Provisions in explaining the sales tax, Funk's statement said:

"This tax will apply to all sales of tangible property to any individual, partnership, corporation, etc., for any purpose other than those in which the purpose of the purchaser is to resell the property to be transferred or to use the property for manufacturing, assembling, processing, or refining."

"It includes the sale for consumption on the premises of any meals, food, or drink at any restaurant, hotel, drugstore, etc., and includes the sale of building materials, artificial gas, oil, electricity, etc."

"It does not include the consideration received for labor or services used in installation, applying, remodeling, or repairing the property sold if the consideration for such services is separately stated in each retail sale. It does not include consideration received for professional services, interest, or finance charges on account of credit, freight delivery, or transportation charges."

The outline of the tax would be: No charge on sales below 9 cents; 1 cent on each sale from 9 cents to 50 cents inclusive; 2 cents from 51 cents to $1.

One cent addition, on each 50 cents of price or fraction thereof in excess of $1.

Exemptions Listed Among the exemptions would be the following: Sales to the State or any subdivision; food for human consumption off premises where sold; gasoline and liquid fuel where a State tax already is imposed.

"Casual and isolated" sales, such as some isolated product from one individual to another.

New or used motor vehicles; livestock, poultry, or other products of the farm; to anyone operating a nonprofit religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational institution; professional insurance or personal service transactions; to other manufacturers, producers, wholesalers, or retail merchants for purpose of retail.

Medicine on prescription of physicians or medicine compounded by druggists; crutches and other artificial appliances; transportation and communication services; advertising space; sales of water; tickets to places of amusement.

There was no indication when the Senate Finance Committee still struggling through the $1.9-billion-dollar budget bill—that it was expected to reach the floor within a comparatively short time.

The sales tax bill has a penalty clause calling for $1000 fine or year in prison, or both, for violations of its provisions.

1 Killed, 11 Hurt as Pullman Runs Wild Down Mountainside

Altoona, Pa., Feb. 28 (U.P.)—The Pullman of the Pennsylvania Railroad, derailed near Altoona, Pa., today, and ran wild down a mountainside, killing one person and injuring 11 others.

Negro Porter Lee Keys of near Altoona, Pa., was killed when the Pullman derailed and ran wild down a mountainside, killing one person and injuring 11 others.

The Pullman, "The Cascade" derailed at 3:54 a. m. on a 1 1/2 mile stretch of track, plunging into a gully and killing 24 persons and injuring 12.

The car came uncoupled in an unexplained manner when the express, running from New York to Texas, stopped near Gallitzin Tunnel to drop a "helper" locomotive after pulling up the 11 1/2 mile mountain grade.

As the loose car backed down the mountain, through the mile-long tunnel and sped past the scene of the "Red Arrow" wreck, Keys and Flagman Edward J. Mulvihill of Pittsburgh called out to the passengers, "Everybody out of the berths! Lie on the floor!"

110 Democrats Join House Republicans; Amendments Lose

The House voted 345 to 56 yesterday to outlaw portal suits and strike many safeguards out of the wage-hour laws.

The bill was the first big labor measure to come to the floor since the Republicans won control of Congress, but it was not hammered through merely as a party measure.

Voting for it were 229 Republicans and 116 Democrats, 5 Republicans and 1 American-Laborite.

The Supreme Court last June ruled, in the Mount Clemens Pottery case, that employers must pay for all the time of their workmen that was under their orders; time spent going from the time clock to the job, in sharpening tools, oiling machines and the like.

Thrown Out as "Trivial" The court added that if this time came only to seconds or minutes it was too trivial to bother with and need not be paid for, a provision which caused Federal Judge Frank A. Picard to throw the Mount Clemens case out of court in Detroit last month.

But the Supreme Court's ruling started a wave of suits all over the country, for a total of almost six billion dollars in back pay, mostly for doing things which were not regarded as paid work at the time they were done.

Suits Filed Haphazardly Most of the suits were unfounded, and were filed with the hope of claiming as much as possible in the hope of winning something.

But they set off propaganda drives on the part of both unions and employers which Judge Picard said distorted the Supreme Court opinion beyond recognition.

As the suits poured into the courts industrial pleas for help poured into Congress, where the Republican drive for laws to curb labor centered on the program of outlawing the portal pay suits.

The bill passed yesterday was the Judiciary Committee's answer to the problem.

creed, or color, which concerns itself only with human needs.

This narrative deals not with nameless millions, but with the boy who will no longer deliver papers down the street because he's lying paralyzed in a hospital, with the athlete whose mind was wiped clean of memory, with a little girl in France whose bare feet were frozen in the snow.

It deals, too, with a Red Cross disaster worker who toiled with the injured throughout the night while his wife and only child lay among the dead.

This is an inspiring record of hope, relief and comfort given. It is a story from the hearts of the millions who helped and were helped by the Red Cross during one 12-month period.

AS THE Nation's official disaster relief agency and as an auxiliary to our armed forces, the Red Cross must maintain direct access to the American people in order to render maximum service under its congressional charter. It can best serve the national interest and retain necessary freedom of action when emergency strikes by conducting an independent appeal for membership and financial support once a year.

The 1947 Red Cross campaign begins tomorrow. Nearly three million volunteers have enlisted to help carry its message to the entire citizenship. I fervently hope these unselfish workers will be welcomed in every home and business establishment of the land.

Let us remind ourselves that many times a year the people turn to the Red Cross—once a year the Red Cross turns to the people. That time is now at hand.

Every dollar contributed will be multiplied in usefulness. Let us keep the Red Cross at full strength. Let us all respond proudly to this call.

Clay Charges Russia Blocks German Unity

Berlin, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Provoked by public Russian allegation that the Potsdam Agreement was violated in the economic merger of the American and British occupation zones, Lieut. Gen. Lucius D. Clay and Air Chief Marshal Sir Sholto Douglas, heads of the United States and British military governments, sharply denied the charges and, in turn, accused the Russians of blocking unification of Germany.

Clay charged further that the Russians had created a foreign monopoly in their zone by seizing ownership of one-third of its remaining industry. He declared they had consistently refused to share the resources of their rich zone with the remainder of the country, while American and British taxpayers had to supply huge sums to feed western Germany.

Douglas accused the Soviets of sabotaging four-power plans for reparations and holding down German industrial production by failing to agree to economic unification of all Germany.

The British military governor charged that the Soviet government, Marshal Vassily D. Sokolovsky, in making public "illusive accusations" against western powers was attempting to "prejudice the public mind" in advance of the Moscow conference.

Clay, United States military governor-designate for Germany, also asserted that the Soviet Union was taking large deliveries from current production in eastern Germany without making any return.

"Investments by the United States in Germany have not been increased by one penny during the occupation," Clay said. "The only foreign-owned monopoly known to the American military government consists of the Soviet AG's (Aktien Gesellschaften)."

Britain to Aid Austria London, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—J. B. Hynd, chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster, told Commons today Britain would place $4 million dollars at Austria's disposal in 1947 for relief and rehabilitation. Hynd said he understood the United States also would come to Austria's aid.

Report San Attempted Vienna, Austria, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Soviet authorities attempted to prevent an Austrian firm under their control from submitting a foreign exchange report to the Austrian National Bank. It was disclosed today at a meeting of the Allied Council.

The information was not acted upon for lack of unanimous agreement. The Russians also were disclosed to have tried unsuccessfully to force credit institutions in their zone to transfer all "German" deposits to Russian bank accounts. About 20 million Reichmarks (two million dollars) are involved.

No Reason for Murder And Suicide, Police Find

Paris, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—If Russian-born Leon Palamantelouk knew yesterday what Paris police know today, he and a pretty dancing teacher still would be alive and Palamantelouk's wife and daughter would not be in a hospital near death.

Palamantelouk believed his wife had been intimate with a handsome physical culture instructor. He thought the dancing teacher had brought them together.

Yesterday morning he battered the skulls of his wife, daughter, and the dancing instructor. Then he threw himself under a speeding train.

A police inspector said today, "We have made a thorough investigation and are convinced Madame Palamantelouk was innocent."

Six Rexist Executed

Mons, Belgium, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Six Belgian Rexist, convicted of serving the Germans in official positions during the Nazi occupation, were shot to death by a firing squad here today.

Airborne Army Of Soviet Seen Leading World

By the Associated Press

Russia is believed to have an airborne army in being or in training far surpassing that of any other power.

Information filtering out of Russia indicates, it was learned yesterday, that the Soviet Union's strength in troops trained for lightning strikes from the air may number as high as 100,000 men.

This force compares with the single airborne division which the United States possesses. That division—the 82nd at Fort Bragg, N. C.—has an authorized strength of 13,000 men but presumably is below that figure.

Efforts to bring the 82nd nearer authorized strength have been complicated by the use of trained airborne soldiers as elements of occupation forces in Germany and Japan.

In Japan, the Eleventh Airborne Division still retains its name and organizational form but the personnel is used only in routine ground occupation duty. The Army's deployment plan, effective this summer calls for existence of only a single airborne division, the 82nd.

Size May Be Misleading Some strategists note that the reported 100,000-man strength of the Russian airborne force may be misleading because of a possible Soviet deficiency in the important matter of air transportation.

Russia's primary aviation interest during the war was in fighter-bomber aircraft and, either because of policy or production difficulties, did little transport plane building. What her strength in transport today is uncertain.

Lend-lease reports show that during the war the United States turned over to Russia about 700 transport airplanes among the 25,000 delivered.

How many of these 700 transports plus any she may have obtained from Britain and built herself still are operable is unknown.

However, American experts have estimated that it requires about 1500 transports of existing designs to move one division of about 12,000 men with their equipment.

4000 in Standard War Unit During World War II, Russia's standard airborne unit was a brigade of slightly more than 4000 men used either as paratroopers or carried in transports. While details are not known, it is believed that the Red army may have organized its postwar airborne force somewhat along the lines of the United States, into divisions probably about the standard 12,000 strength.

The armaments and vehicles used in the wartime Russian airborne organization roughly paralleled that of other nations, including howitzers, anti-tank weapons, mortars and two or three classes of machine guns and motorcycles and bicycles.

Although Russia was one of the pioneers in prewar paratrooper experiments, she made little use of airborne forces during the conflict with Germany, presumably because of her own peculiar military problem.

She was fighting on land, at close quarters with huge masses of troops, where the element of surprise was at a minimum.

CLAPP

Minority Leader Barkley (D., Ky.) said, "I expect the Administration to make a fight. It is not the first time a man ever got an adverse report from a committee."

Most adverse reports in Senate history have stood up, but now and then one has been overturned.

President Truman promised to do all he could to see that this one was. He told his press conference that Clapp was "a good man, a career public servant, a man who had done as much as any one to build up the TVA and is perfectly fitted to become its chief."

National Weather Summary

PREVIEW OF U.S. WEATHER BUREAU, DEPT. OF COMMERCE FORECAST...PERIOD ENDING 7:30 PM EST 3-1-47

Twenty-four hour forecast: Precipitation will be general over the Eastern half of the country as the two low pressure cells shown on the Forecast move eastward. Snow showers are forecast for portions of Montana, the Dakotas, Wyoming, Iowa, Nevada and central Utah. Snow will blanket parts of Kansas, Nebraska, Nevada, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and northern New Mexico. Rain or snow will occur through Kentucky and Tennessee. Rain is forecast for eastern Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi and eastern Louisiana while rain showers will develop over the Carolinas and Georgia. (See precipitation cloudy areas map.)

Considerable cloudiness will envelop the major portion of the country. Clear skies will be confined to Washington, northern Oregon and part of Arizona. Partly cloudy weather can be expected through New England, eastern New York, the upper Lakes, southern Florida, the Rockies, northern Oregon and California. (See partly cloudy and cloudy areas map.)

Snow will invade the central Mississippi Valley and the central Plains Friday night; move northward and reach southern New York and New England Saturday night.

Temperatures will be slightly warmer through the Southeast while cooler weather will be experienced in the Central Plains. Somewhat warmer temperatures are forecast for the Pacific States.

How Tempus Fugit Wind Puffs, Nylons Poof! As Fumes Bare Girls' Shins

By the Associated Press

Round Brook, N. J., Feb. 28 (U.P.)—The case of the vanishing nylons was solved today.

Women employees of the Cyanamid Co. complained that as they walked only 50 yards to a cafeteria, a new pair of nylon hose would dissolve into nothing but a few ravel of thread.

Engineers found that a live vat was being cleaned with live steam nearby. When the wind-blown fumes struck the nylons, a chemical reaction caused them to dissolve.

Kiss in a Car Costs $15 London, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—A judge ruled today that a kiss is worth at least $15, especially if it's obtained in a moving automobile.

The judge fined Julian Hambley, summoned to court on charges of reckless driving, a total of $30 for kissing his girl friend twice while driving a car.

A police officer testified that while Hambley was embracing the car veered from the left to the right side of the road.

Fraulein-izing Frankfurt, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Eighty-seven American men in the Frankfurt area alone have applied for permission to marry German girls, United States Army headquarters officials said today.

Nine of the prospective German brides are pregnant and one has a child by the soldier she wishes to marry, the applications disclosed.

Many of the girls are older than their soldier fiancés. Four are widows, two of them with children by their former husbands.

Four of the American applicants are officers, 26 are enlisted and 57 civilian employees of the War Department.

The first wedding is expected to occur late in March.

Scorched Earth Chicago, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—The thieves who broke into Peter Skizas' West Side restaurant, he told police, were completely thorough in their job of stealing.

They took $50 from the cash register, cigars and cigarettes, a typewriter, a radio, silverware, cutlery, and raided the kitchen, taking 20 pounds of butter.

Their final act was breaking open the telephone coin box and taking all the coins.

Now He Loses Wife Seattle, Wash., Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Mrs. Glenna B. Rich, filing suit for divorce, charged that her husband, Edgar, had a "vile and ungovernable temper."

She said he upset the checkerboard whenever he saw he was going to lose.

What's in a Name? Los Angeles, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Mrs. Jean Bagley wants a legal separation from one of two brothers, she isn't sure which.

Her suit for annulment or divorce said she wasn't certain of her intended bridegroom's first name when she was married in Mexico last December 26.

But she added that she was sure of one thing: When she glanced at the marriage certificate it bore the name of Rudolph S. Bagley and that, she alleges, is the name of the brother of her intended husband.

The suit is directed against both brothers, "John Doe" and Rudolph S. Bagley.

Truman Gives Willkie Prizes, Asks Harmony

By the Associated Press

The Negro press has amply demonstrated its capability for courageous, constructive reporting and editorial writing, President Truman said last night in presenting the Wendell L. Willkie Awards for Journalism.

Attending the second annual dinner held in the National Press Club ballroom, sponsored by the award foundation, the president's brief address appealed for Americans to set the example—in a world of peoples moving toward independence—of a nation in which people of different backgrounds and different origins work peacefully and successfully alongside one another.

For excellence of performance in 1946, the following received the Willkie awards from President Truman:

Norfolk Journal and Guide (Norfolk, Va.), for the best example of a public service which contributes to the greater enjoyment of the democratic way of life by all people. The presentation was made to P. Bernard Young, editor.

D. C. Paper Honored Ralph Matthews, of the Afro-American Newspapers, Washington, for the best example of objective newspaper reporting.

William O. Walker, editor of the Cleveland Call and Post, for the best example of writing other than news reporting.

In addition, a special certificate of merit was awarded to the Chicago Defender and Radio Station WBBM (Columbia Broadcasting System) for their collaboration in presenting a weekly radio program, "The Negro in America." The parchment scroll was accepted by H. Leslie Atlass, of WBBM, and Charles P. Browning, of the Defender.

Associate Justice Felix Frankfurter and Frank L. Stanley, president of the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association, also addressed the gathering of nearly 200 leaders in government and journalism at the annual dinner. Dr. Douglas S. Freeman, Richmond editor and author, presided. He is president of the Wendell L. Willkie Awards for Journalism.

One of the guests of honor was the widow of the Republican standard-bearer of 1940 in whose memory the awards were established.

Cash awards of $250 each went to the Norfolk Journal and Guide, Matthews and Walker. In addition, a plaque was presented to the Norfolk Journal and Guide.

An extensive campaign which disclosed deplorable conditions in the Negro schools of Princess Anne County, Va., won the public service award for the Norfolk Journal and Guide.

Honorable mention went to the Louisville (Ky.) Defender and the Louisiana Weekly (New Orleans). The award to Matthews was for his series of articles, published in the Afro-American, on the Haitian revolution and the administration of the Virgin Islands by Governor William H. Hastie.

Enoch P. Waters, Chicago Defender, and Louis R. Lautier of Washington, White House correspondent and chief of the news service for the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association, received honorable mention.

Walker's prize was in recognition of his columnizing in the Cleveland Call and Post in the interest of good citizenship and interracial harmony.

Honorable mention in this event went to Lewis Jones, of the Boston Informer, and Robert D. Birmingham Weekly Review.

Stuart Denies Quitting Canton, China, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—United States Ambassador J. Leighton Stuart told the Associated Press today that reports that he would resign were "not true."

2 Jews Killed, Bank Blasted In Palestine

Jerusalem, Palestine, Feb. 28 (U.P.)—Two Jews were killed today, two soldiers were seriously wounded and others were reported less seriously injured when Jewish underground agents time-bombed Barclay's Bank in Haifa.

Three explosions rocked the port area a few hours after British navy men and troops forcibly took 1350 fighting illegal immigrants ashore from the steamship Haim Arlosoroff, which had sought to run the blockade.

Five refugees and two British seamen were wounded in the fighting. There were more casualties when the immigrants were forced aboard the steamships Empire Heywood and Ocean Vigor for deportation to Cyprus.

It was believed that underground operatives blew up the bank, causing severe damage, in revenge for the interception of the immigrant ship.

But before the explosions the Palestine Supreme Court had ordered British authorities to show cause next Tuesday why the immigrants should not be permitted to enter this country.

(Government sources said in London today that a Jewish Agency request for increase of the monthly Jewish immigration quota for Palestine to 4000 was under consideration.) The Associated Press reported.

District Charter

Senator McCarran had reason to turn down sharply some of the changes suggested by the District Commissioners in his home-rule bill. The Commissioners had urged, for example, that the membership of the commission which is to draw up a charter for the District be expanded and that it should be composed of representatives of local organizations. A charter commission so constituted would obviously have to include a member of every civic group in the city, which would make it an utterly unwieldy body. Hope for agreement within such a group on the provisions of a District Charter would probably be nil. This inept suggestion seems to justify Senator McCarran's outburst about a deliberate attempt to sabotage the local charter movement.

Not all of the Commissioners' suggestions belong in that category, however. They made the wholly valid point that the McCarran bill would not allow the charter commission sufficient funds to hire experts. Unless this defect is corrected the unpaid citizens' commission will be seriously handicapped in trying to work out an exemplary modern charter for the Capital City. The alternative to the hiring of experts would be the borrowing of experts from the Government. If authority for the commission to call upon such experts in both the Federal and District governments were made plain in the bill, and authority were also given to such establishments to cooperate with the commission, the lack of funds to hire technicians in the art of city charter drafting would be much less disturbing.

As for the general advice of the District Commissioners, we see no reason why the Senators interested in this bill should seek it further or consider it of any real significance when given. Approval of a charter setting up a city-manager type of government responsible to the people of the District would put the Commissioners out of a job. It is unreasonable to expect them to take any part in abolishing the type of appointive government which they have become accustomed to operate. We suggest that the subcommittee in charge of this bill forget about the Commissioners for once and give heed to the demand of unofficial citizen groups for restoration of an elected city council. Some Senators have been much too willing in the past to hide behind the Commissioners' self-interest.

Deserved Rebuke

Chairman Fred Bradley of the House Merchant Marine Committee was not severe enough, in our opinion, in his rebuke to Representative Alvin F. Weichel for his casual issuance of a subpoena summoning Secretary of State Marshall before a congressional subcommittee. Mr. Bradley says that his fellow Republican legislator had "gone off half-cooked" and had made a spectacular play for publicity. That is rather mild language for an impertinent, smart-aleck gesture which at a most critical moment threatened to inject partisanship into the conduct of our foreign policy.

The situation as we see it is this: Secretary Marshall is up to his neck in the work of preparing for the Moscow conference. That task has been complicated by grave new responsibilities which the misfortunes of Great Britain are shifting to American shoulders. On the very day when the subpoena incident came to a head, Secretary Marshall was holding a solemn session with the President and top congressional leaders on the momentous shifts in world power that are in the making. Apparently oblivious to this burden which the Secretary of State is carrying, or indifferent to it, an irresponsible subcommittee chairman on the Hill made a legal demand that the Secretary drop whatever he might be doing and submit to cross-examination to satisfy the curiosity of a handful of legislators. It is precisely this sort of boner that brings Congress into disrepute and encourages resistance when it has legitimate demands to make upon the executive branch.

Undersecretary-Dean Acheson diplomatically avoided any possible charge of non-cooperation on the part of the State Department by informally submitting to Chairman Bradley all the information that Mr. Weichel was seeking. That was a gesture of real cooperation; for the committee has no constitutional right, in our opinion, to demand either documents or an accounting for policy in the conduct of our foreign relations. This field of policy-making is committed solely to the President, save as the Senate is given the right to advise and consent to the ratification of treaties. In other words, the State Department leaned backward to preserve a feeling of good will between itself and Congress. But cooperation is a two-way street, and if legislators fail to recognize that fact

World Crisis

The canvass of the world crisis that the President and Secretary Marshall undertook Thursday with key legislators seems to have had a sobering effect on Capitol Hill. What Secretary Marshall reported has not been revealed except in respect of Greece. But he who runs can read the import of what he must have said. The forces of disintegration are on the march in all the countries which share our belief in the kind of world order we seek to establish. Of the Big Five, three are obviously prostrate. A raging inflation, coupled with civil war, has China in its grip. Britain and France both are afflicted with an anemia which is disabling them for world responsibilities. Their sickness has made the harsh winter look like a malignant fate applying the last straw. One result is the announcement that the British must quit Greece unless American aid is forthcoming. Great areas of power are now of course being vacated as historical states with far-flung interests seek to trim ends to their straightened means. Britain and France are hard put to it to cope with their internal troubles, let alone the commitments they have abroad. In these circumstances the fate of Europe is looming as an issue between Russia and America.

It is a bad situation when two Titans with no common policy hold the keys to world power. But it is our firm belief that there is little to distinguish between the weakness of Russia and the weakness of our other allies. In other words, that we are actually the only Titan in the modern world. For instance, we reported the other day the first news of a famine in southern Russia of proportions surpassing even the dreadful famine of 1921. The difference between Russia and our other allies is that Russia is shrouded in mystery and held down by the police, but they are all in the same condition of economic weakness. The fact is that for some reason or other only known to Himself, God has limited His favors to America. But you would not realize the unique position we enjoy in the world of nations. We are great, but, as a result of our political setup, we are great as a nation, not as a state. Russia, on the contrary, is a great state but a weak nation. At one period it was sufficient for America to be in Kansas. Nowadays, if we are to live up to our destinies, if we are not going to see the world fall apart, we irreparable damage to our foreign policy will be done.

Fortunately, Republican leaders in the House have moved to stop the issuance of off-the-cuff subpoenas. Hereafter the signature of the Speaker and the committee chairman will be required. We hope that Mr. Weichel's chagrin will also help to deter any others who may be tempted to make a cheap bid for headlines to the detriment of teamwork in this all-important sphere of policy-making.

Merger

It was not easy to graft the new order of ideas on the old, and some of the fruits of the grafting may, I fear, for a time be blighted.

These were the words of President Wilson during the Senate debate over the peace treaties in 1919. They apply with much force to the bill for integrating the armed forces which President Truman sent to Congress Wednesday. For the President's proposal is the bitter fruit of compromise between rival service ideas which still require to be harmoniously jelled in action. Thus there will be a premium on the men chosen to carry out the merger and on the will to find common ground for working together. There is, of course, to be a Secretary of National Defense, with great powers on paper. But the Secretaries of War, Navy and Air Force, who serve under him, are empowered to go over his head to the President on matters in controversy, though they will not have Cabinet rank.

At its worst the unification bill in its present form could easily become what we termed, at the time the President first announced the merger, "quadruplication." It could be regarded as an authorization for the Army and Navy to continue their quarrels with official blessing. Indeed, conflict seems inevitable in such matters as a delineation of the functions of naval aviation. While the bill mentions joint procurement, the provision is couched in generalities which might be hard to apply to specific instances. There is no directive, for instance, which would definitely call for the elimination of duplicate facilities such as airfields. In this respect Washington is a cross example of parallel effort. Likewise the measure ignores such important areas as coordination of medical services. There are dangerous weasel phrases such as "maintain liaison," which can mean anything or nothing. In other words, the President's bill can bring about integration only if the will is present, and the job of making the top appointment is thus crucial to the entire scheme.

Crippling TVA

Rejection by the Senate Public Works Committee of Gordon Clapp's nomination as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority seems an act of petty political harassment. President Truman chose Mr. Clapp to succeed David Lilienthal in the TVA post on a merit basis. It was a choice thoroughly warranted by Mr. Clapp's long experience and proven ability as general manager of the Authority. Against the nominee's outstanding qualifications the committee could weigh only the fatuous and vindictive charges made by Senator Kenneth McKellar, embittered by his failure to secure patronage control of the agency.

The committee members who voted against Mr. Clapp, 4 Republicans and 3 Democrats, were voting, in reality, against the TVA itself. Some of the Senators openly admitted as much. The others who opposed the President's choice acted, whether intentionally or not, to undermine one of the greatest of contemporary American achievements—merely because it was an achievement wrought under the New Deal. We must be as strong in western Europe as in Kansas.

That can be done by the exercise of leadership both in Congress and in the Executive. There has been no positive program for winning the peace after the most debilitating war in all history. We have allowed the Russians to block even our puny efforts at reconstruction. But, more importantly, we have concerned ourselves with what we have called our own affairs. The successful campaign to get rid of price controls put an intolerable burden on dollar-poor Europe dependent on buying in America. Last week, Congress, in the interests of the candy and soft-drink people, wrung a bigger quota of sugar for America out of the world's supply. In a word, since the Eightieth Congress assembled we have had a run of peanut politics. So the first essential is for our leaders to live up to our greatness. This puts the burden on all the politicians fiddling with their fears about Lillenthal or chipping at the budget to be statesmen. A statesman thinks of the next generation, not the next election. And there will be no next generation if we do not grapple with our world responsibilities: that is to say, unless Congress gives the green light to the Executive to act audaciously.

A plan of action, executed in the spirit of system, would at least call for the protection of the bastions of power in all the accesses to our continent. While the world is sick, let us get over our paralyzing and foolish fears about intervention and about imperialism. Everywhere it must be known that the United States is the natural enemy of aggression. A job has to be done, and we are the only country that can do it. The task includes help for our friends and making it stick through the United Nations. The relief program should be legislated swiftly, the World Bank can now attend to the French application for a loan, China should be aided to go back to a silver standard, and the British should be so relieved of dollar commitments undertaken in behalf of peacemaking that we can tackle and bring back into full production the key resource of Europe, viz. the Ruhr. The gloom of the legislators on leaving the White House testified to a realization of the gravity of the world crisis.

Your February 25 editorial on the action of the House in voting down daylight saving time for the District is puzzling. You make it sound as if daylight saving time were something entirely within the power of Congress to grant or withhold.

Concerted action by the District's various commercial, industrial, and other groups of employers, including the executive branch of the national Government, could by simply changing the hours of work during the summer months bring daylight saving time to the District despite the failure of Congress to vote it. Here seems to be an opportunity for Washington to achieve by its own efforts what Congress, rightly or wrongly, appears unwilling to grant by legislative fiat.

If as you believe a substantial majority of the residents and workers of Washington favor daylight saving time for summer, a vigorous community leadership such as that evident in the annual Community Chest drives ought to find little trouble in organizing a shift of the hours of work. It seems almost a reflection upon the vitality of Washington as a community with powers of its own to act, to plead that Congress give what the District can have for the taking.

FORMER DISTRICT RESIDENT
Alexandria, Va.

I have just finished reading the first of a series of articles entitled "Tuberculosis Case Survey Is Asked Here" by Gerald G. Gross. I am simply amazed that Health Officer George C. Ruhland is reluctant to have the United States Public Health Service X-ray the residents of the District of Columbia for fear of uncovering some 1000 to 5000 additional cases of tuberculosis. Also that Commissioner Mason is "genuinely concerned with the seriousness of the situation; that the disclosure of these cases would bring catastrophe."

Never have I read anything that would convince me more fully that the form of government enjoyed in the Nation's Capital needs a complete overhauling. These gentlemen are not concerned with the possibility that 1000 to 5000 undisclosed cases of tuberculosis are many potential sources of infection. They are concerned that the residents might become aware of the appalling conditions that exist here.

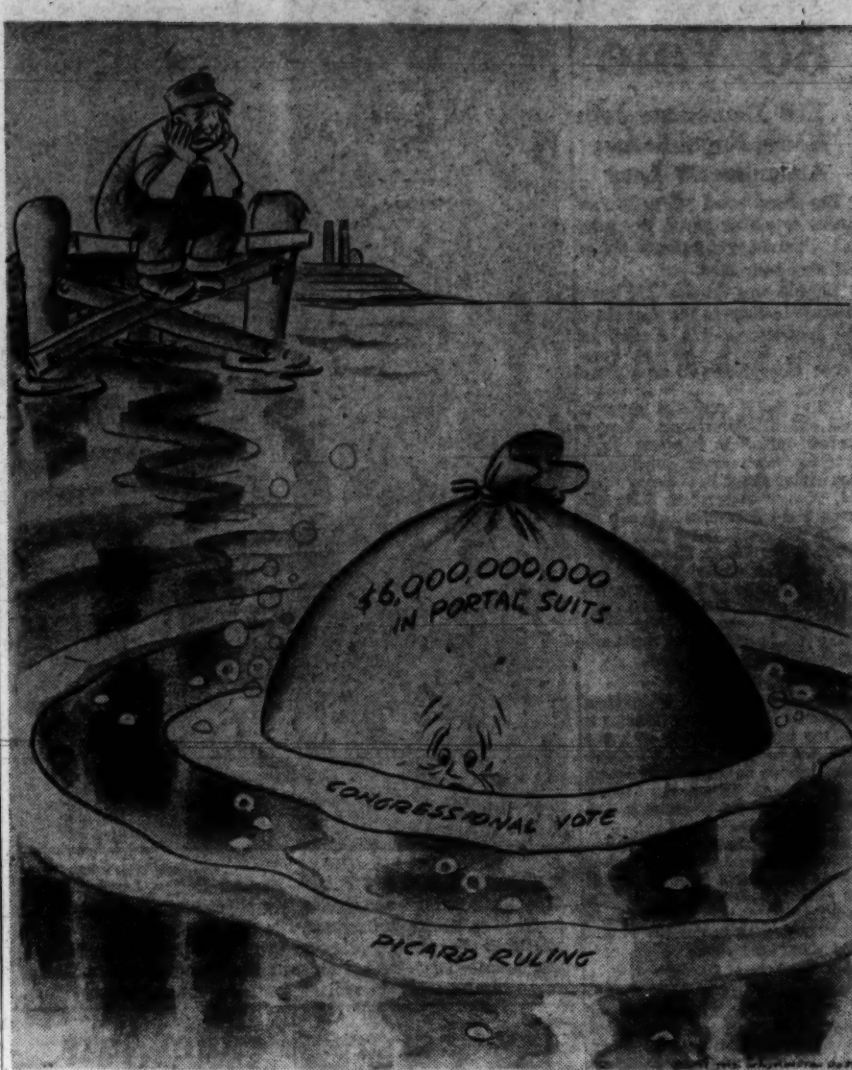

Every State has its free hospitals for the diagnosis of tuberculosis and sanatoria for its cure. Does it not seem reasonable that the Nation's Capital would have the same facilities?
MRS. FRANCES USWALD,
Washington.

Light For Workers

Now that the Senate District Committee has buried its daylight-saving bill following the House's shortsighted vote, Washingtonians are presumably left to their own devices if they want to enjoy an extra hour for recreation this summer. In this connection we are impressed by the suggestions contained in the letter from "Former District Resident," printed elsewhere on this page. There is nothing to prevent Washington from achieving daylight saving on its own if business houses and Government offices will cooperate to advance working schedules by one hour.

This, we think, would be an admirable project for the Board of Trade to sponsor. To be sure, coordination of such a program would present many difficulties. But we think it is the sort of idea that would snowball once it got started. If stores and private offices would agree, for instance, the Board of Trade could request the President to set up working hours of Government agencies. We feel sure that streetcar and bus companies would cooperate with such a venture once general observance was assured. We think the majority of Washington residents want the benefits which daylight saving would provide. If these benefits are to be made possible, however, Washingtonians must make themselves heard. We suggest that people who desire such a change write to the Board of Trade and second the motion—and this goes especially for the great body of Government workers who traditionally are mute lest they be charged with attempting to influence legislation. Daylight saving now is, strictly a District affair on which everyone's opinion counts. There is more than one way to skin a cat if Congress persists in thinking of Washington's interests last.

Daylight Saving

Your February 25 editorial on the action of the House in voting down daylight saving time for the District is puzzling. You make it sound as if daylight saving time were something entirely within the power of Congress to grant or withhold.

Concerted action by the District's various commercial, industrial, and other groups of employers, including the executive branch of the national Government, could by simply changing the hours of work during the summer months bring daylight saving time to the District despite the failure of Congress to vote it. Here seems to be an opportunity for Washington to achieve by its own efforts what Congress, rightly or wrongly, appears unwilling to grant by legislative fiat.

If as you believe a substantial majority of the residents and workers of Washington favor daylight saving time for summer, a vigorous community leadership such as that evident in the annual Community Chest drives ought to find little trouble in organizing a shift of the hours of work. It seems almost a reflection upon the vitality of Washington as a community with powers of its own to act, to plead that Congress give what the District can have for the taking.

FORMER DISTRICT RESIDENT
Alexandria, Va.

I have just finished reading the first of a series of articles entitled "Tuberculosis Case Survey Is Asked Here" by Gerald G. Gross. I am simply amazed that Health Officer George C. Ruhland is reluctant to have the United States Public Health Service X-ray the residents of the District of Columbia for fear of uncovering some 1000 to 5000 additional cases of tuberculosis. Also that Commissioner Mason is "genuinely concerned with the seriousness of the situation; that the disclosure of these cases would bring catastrophe."

Never have I read anything that would convince me more fully that the form of government enjoyed in the Nation's Capital needs a complete overhauling. These gentlemen are not concerned with the possibility that 1000 to 5000 undisclosed cases of tuberculosis are many potential sources of infection. They are concerned that the residents might become aware of the appalling conditions that exist here.

Every State has its free hospitals for the diagnosis of tuberculosis and sanatoria for its cure. Does it not seem reasonable that the Nation's Capital would have the same facilities?

Gen. John C. H. Lee

In Drew Pearson's column of February 24 appears a sketch of Gen. J. C. H. Lee. It appears to me to be an attempt to hurt a great character. There have been similar attempts by others. It is high time they were answered. I have known General Lee since we were boys together at West Point. I served under him in France. There is probably no individual in the armed forces to whom America owes a greater gratitude than to John Clifford Hodges Lee. The war in Europe was to a unusual degree, a war of supply after the breakthrough in Normandy.

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given preference, and all letters are subject to condensation. Contributions are limited to one letter a month. No communication can be returned.

Cherbourg was going off the track because the dirt was settling in the shell holes over which the new rails were laid; when the requirements in the front were greater than could be met by all facilities available; when the situation looked hopeless, it was General Lee who was the driving and directing force of this greatest supply operation the world has ever seen. He was everywhere, urging, directing, inspiring, disciplining, encouraging. He was lucky if two nights a week he got six hours sleep in his hotel in Paris.

General Lee was taken from the command of his combat division, his pride and hope, and given the most thankless task of the war. In the performance of it he drove men relentlessly because there were boys up front who needed supplies. He had been there every few days to see what they needed most. He relieved incompetents (and, therefore, made enemies) to get these supplies forward. He was in the air in his plane for days every week—flying in weather when planes were grounded. No man took greater chances. He was hard. He was relentless. He was the son of his friends were killed in action he was as gentle as a woman.

John Lee is very great man. He has performed an almost superhuman task. Let us at least give him a square deal.

Returning the Dead

In The Post and other Washington newspapers short articles and releases appeared recently on repatriation, overseas cemeteries and pilgrimages. Many of these have been written with apparent intent to circumvent Public Law 383, Seventy-ninth Congress, for the return of all overseas dead. It is a pretty figure of speech. "Let the tree lie where it has fallen." However, like many trees, these dead do not remain where they have fallen but are moved several times, perhaps three, four or five times prior to interment in a permanent resting place regardless of the wishes of the next of kin. This condition... is necessary because of geographic economic and public health considerations.

As it is necessary to disturb these remains, Public Law 383, Seventy-ninth Congress, was enacted to insure the one-time moving of these remains, i.e., repatriation and reburial in the United States, in either a National Cemetery or a private cemetery, whichever the next of kin desired, and thus avoid the possible objections of the loss of identity if these remains were moved several times before final interment.

As an economic measure this law was created to avoid expenditures in the establishing of overseas cemeteries, designed, constructed and maintained by native labor with native materials but paid for by United States taxpayers, and also to eliminate, as foreign governments so aptly phrase it, the hope of tourist trade possibilities resulting from these proposed pilgrimages. That their sacrifice may be an eloquent reminder of the cost of our freedom and the democratic way of life which this country, above all others, represents, it is proper and fitting that the remains of our dead be returned for permanent burial in this, their native soil.

Just Government For Korea

The many solutions that have appeared in the columns of the papers for the present situation in Korea are very interesting, and many of them very good. There is one point, however, that I consider fundamental, and which seems to have been overlooked by the proponents of such solution. This point is the use, in key government position, of Korean nationals who have come under the influence of Japanese domination. Although Koreans who have lived in Korea all through the Japanese occupation, from 1910 until the liberation, may give every sign of willing cooperation with military government, they are not to be trusted entirely. From the time of the end of the Sino-Japanese war in 1945, Korea was under the strong influence of the Japanese, to the extent that it was virtually under Japanese occupation even before actual military occupation. Thus it is that nearly all active Koreans who have lived in their country during the past 35 years have consciously or unconsciously come under Japanese influence.

During their occupation of Korea, the Japanese placed the population behind an iron curtain, so that no foreign influence or culture other than Japanese, could have any effect on the people. Just as Japanese today are cooperative with Military Government, but keep their own secret counsel for the time when Americans leave, so also the Koreans after a lifetime of Japanese domination, have their own idea as to what they will do when Americans and Russians depart. Their principles stem from the Japanese philosophy and way of life, and it is precisely this philosophy that Americans must discourage through re-education of the Korean people.

This does not mean that the occupation of Korea is necessary. There are still large numbers of Korean families that have lived all during the Japanese occupation in foreign countries. In the United States, China, Russia and in Europe, biding their time, maintaining their faith in eventual Korean independence, and the fond hope one day to be able to return to their native land. These people have had the precious opportunity for a liberal education, free of all Japanese influence, with broader minds and liberal philosophies. These people now seek re-entry into Korea. Many of them are professional men, independent, and of the strongest patriotic principles; they are men capable in every way of being political leaders in Korea. It has been virtually impossible for these people to return to their country because the present policy of the Military Governments is to discourage their entry into the occupied territory. Plausible reasons are given, such as the food shortage and the general economic situation, which, although true, are not sufficient reasons for thus obstructing the political rebirth of the nation. The reason for which this policy has been maintained is that a certain clique of Korean advisers to the Military Governments, through ambition and the fear that they may lose their power, have sought to discourage the re-entry particularly of those individuals and families who might bid fair to participate in the new government.

After a terrible war to promote peace and justice in the world, I believe Americans and Russians must do everything possible to bring about just government in the liberated nations. It is my belief that the point I have set forth will be of assistance in attaining that end in Korea.

Rejuvenating Democracy

By Malvina Lindsay

Students and 'Isms'

THE GIRL had a radiant freshness and perfection that made her seem very young. But her brow was troubled, her eyes serious. She had been to three colleges and she had a cause.

It was about democracy—or rather what a lot of young people thought was democracy. "College and even high school kids," she said, "are going to turn more and more to socialism, communism, maybe fascism, unless some way is found to wake them up to what a good thing they've already got."

"All this talk of fighting communism in the schools is so silly," she went on. "Why should our system be on the defensive? Why aren't we smart enough to grab the offense, make young people realize how vital, exciting and wonderful our own representative democracy is—or at least could be if we worked at it?"

But instead of that—and it simply maddened her to think of it—here were students associating the American political faith merely with dry civics and prosy history classes, or with the stuffy, hackneyed precepts handed out by parents, teachers and campaign orators.

—That wasn't the worst! Some of the brightest students, the ones mentally adventurous, were turning to communism—the "ism" of the moment—because it seemed a new and exciting way of righting the world's wrongs, and because it gave them a cause to work for. And how people from 18 to 25 loved a cause!

SHE HAD MET a variety of students and professors in her three colleges, which included a Southern girls' school, a pioneer Midwestern college with liberal leanings, and a denominational institution backed by well-to-do, mentally rock-ribbed citizens. On every campus it was the same. The exciting, well-attended classes were usually taught by instructors about whom "Socialist" or "Communist" was whispered.

However, it was what lay ahead that troubled her most. "Kids aren't too worried about their own futures," she said. "When they fall for communism, it's the idealism, the emotional appeal that gets them. But as jobs get scarcer, they're going to think more in terms of their own interest. Young people are apt to think society owes them something—they're not getting it." They certainly were not getting it in the '30's. When they see the glaring faults in their own economy, they blame democracy, not its abuses. They think some other system might make things right.

"Then the Communists come along. They're not so dumb. They go after the bitter ones. Or, it might work the other way if some body like Hitler showed up—and things were bad enough. Remember how kids fell for him?"

"WHAT I WANT to know is, why aren't we preparing against this? Why aren't we doing more to get young people, even children, stirred up about democracy? I don't mean flag waving and yelling at meetings? I mean waking up to what our system gives us, being so proud of our personal freedom and opportunities, we're willing to make a great cause out of them. At least there ought to be some way of making students understand that the bad things they see, the monopolies, the selfish pressures groups, commercial greed, short-sighted government, lazy citizens, aren't democracy."

No, she hadn't any blueprint for that. But she thought a few things could be done, as lifting civics courses out of their doldrums, maybe calling some youth conferences on the problem. There surely ought to be a way to make a political faith emotionally appealing without having to drag it down to stomach level. The big thing was to make American young people realize that their system gave them a lot but it was the hardest in the world to live under because its citizens never could relax, but constantly had to pay for their freedom.

Yes, that was a big program, she agreed. But what about all this money and brains being put into defense weapons against a country that as far as she could see was more interested in winning world dominance by ideas than by rockets? Wouldn't it make more sense to learn to use the same weapons?

Snow Parking

The Washington Police Department again showed its efficiency, particularly, the Third Precinct. They gave out parking tickets indiscriminately on Tuesday, February 25, for parking more than 18 hours in the same place. At $10 a ticket, I daresay a considerable amount of money will be collected. The street on which my car was parked is still covered with ice about two inches thick. There being little traffic, it was apparently decided that it was unnecessary to use a snow plow to clear the street. Though having numerous occasions when I would have preferred to use my car, I used public transportation instead because I felt it would be safer for me and for the public. In "playing safe to play longer," I among many others have been penalized.

My hat's off to the captain at Precinct 13, who prepared a warning notice to motorists in his area, and more so to the captain of Precinct 13 who evidently considered the motorists were doing him a favor by leaving their cars parked. He issued neither warning notices or tickets. I'm sure the residents in these areas have a higher regard for the police than residents in the Third Precinct. A. S. H.

Freedom At Stake

By Walter Lippmann

A PAMPHLET of only about 36 pages has recently been published in Great Britain which poses concretely, and more poignantly than any other contemporary document, the problem of the preservation of freedom in our time. The pamphlet is the White Paper presented by the Prime Minister to Parliament, and it is called simply "Economic Survey for 1947."

It is worth the most careful study in this country, not only because it states the hard facts which will compel us in the fairly near future to take extraordinary measures but also, because it discloses so many of the real issues underlying the ideological conflict throughout the world.

This pamphlet throws more light on the choices which men have to make than can be written about the theories of communism on the one hand and of free enterprise on the other.

THE BROADEST, and in many ways the most significant, conclusion which one may draw is that the basic problem of Britain—and of the European countries including Germany—is radically different from that of the United States and the Russian. The fundamental conditions, being different from those in either of the two great ideological rivals, the British and the Europeans must take a different course.

The controlling difference is, as the White Paper puts it for Britain, that "we have not enough resources to do all that we want to do. We have barely enough to do all that we must do. Whether we reckon in manpower, coal, electricity, steel or national production as a whole, the conclusion is unavoidable." What Britain must do is to export enough to pay for the raw materials of the food she must import, and of the raw materials she needs for herself and for the manufacture that she must export. The Canadian and American credits, and some invisible income, will for the next two or three years make up the other quarter.

THE QUESTION is how much economic freedom—as we understand it—can a country in this position afford? It is evident at once that it cannot afford to allow the people freedom to buy abroad. It has to control and ration its imports; otherwise Britons will buy more than the nation has American and Canadian money to pay with, and individuals will buy goods which they would like to have rather than those goods which the whole nation most needs. The people of Britain cannot afford the freedom to import.

Only the absolute necessities can be imported. They will be scarce, the supply will be less than the demand. Therefore, the British cannot afford to allow themselves the freedom to consume the freedom to buy as much of anything as they have British money to pay with. They have to ration themselves. Therefore they cannot allow

Public Favors U. S. Clinics To Give Birth Control Data

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 28.—At the present time, seven States throughout the United States furnish birth control information to married people who want it as a regular part of their Public Health Service.

First of the States to do so was North Carolina, back in 1938. Most recent was Virginia, in 1943. Meanwhile, campaigns are going forward to have similar services incorporated as a part of the Public Health Service in a number of the other States.

The whole idea is one which meets with widespread public approval.

In fact, a Nation-wide poll on the topic finds better than seven out of every ten among the voting population approving the idea.

The Institute has on this issue, as on many other questions of social importance, merely measured public sentiment. Taking no sides on any issue, its function is solely to report facts about public opinion.

In making the poll, the Institute questioned a representative cross-section of the American voting population, in all parts of the Nation, as follows:

Would you approve or disapprove of having Government health clinics furnish birth control information to married people who want it in this country?

The replies:

Yes.....64%

No.....23%

No opinion.....13%

Institute statisticians come up with some interesting differences in thinking among various population groups.

People in the survey who had had the benefit of college training are generally far more in favor of disseminating birth control information than people with a grammar school (or less) education.

Approval of the idea is much more prevalent among people under 30 years of age than among those over 50 years of age.

The vote on the issue by these groups is shown in the table below:

Group	Yes	No	No opinion
Age
Under 30	76%	18%	6%
30-40	68%	22%	10%
40-50	62%	28%	10%
50-60	58%	32%	10%
60-70	52%	38%	10%
70+	48%	42%	10%
Education
College	76%	18%	6%
High school	68%	22%	10%
Grammar school	62%	28%	10%
Less than grammar	58%	32%	10%

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Russia's Trusteeship Concession

A NEW Secretary of State never begins with a clean blackboard. The record has been written by his predecessors and he must accept it as he must accept the record that he himself has made.

As Secretary of State George C. Marshall leaves for Moscow, in his briefcase he takes with him not merely the present but the past. Commitments have been made. Policy has been staked out. General Marshall will constantly find himself pulled up short by the long rope of the past.

Take the matter of trusteeships. Here is one for the most fascinating plays in the international poker game. We find the Russians suddenly agreeing with us. Not just agreeing passively but agreeing with a fine, warm enthusiasm.

We can be sure there is a good reason behind this agreement. It will come to light sooner or later. Secretary Marshall will doubtless discover the reason in Moscow.

A BIT OF background undisclosed may have a bearing on the Soviet note giving the Kremlin blessing to American trusteeship over the former Japanese-occupied islands. While former Secretary of State James F. Byrnes was in Paris last summer he had a long showdown session with Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov. One of the points Molotov raised was the American proposal to exercise sole trusteeship over those islands.

Byrnes was ready for that one. He had been coached by the Navy on what to say. In reply he asked Molotov what the Russians meant by their sole occupation of the Kurile Islands, which stretch in a string of dots from the Siberian mainland down to Japan, and also of the Japanese half of the island of Sakhalin, which before the war had been shared by Japan and Russia. The United States Navy takes the view that Russian occupation of the Kuriles and Sakhalin is a threat to our defense lines between the Aleutians and the mid-Pacific.

Molotov, in his turn, said that the Kuriles and Sakhalin were a closed issue and not subject to discussion. Thereupon Byrnes said:

"I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you gentlemen in court shortly," said Municipal Judge John P. McMahon yesterday to a lineup of Congressmen.

"As visitors, you mean," said Representative Hebert (D., La.).

Their audience laughed. That's what the judge had meant—a serious invitation to the members of the House District public health subcommittee to visit Municipal Court Monday and see how alcoholism in the District shows up there the morning after a weekend.

Chairman A. L. Miller (R., Neb.) said he was glad to have the invitation, and that the subcommittee will make the visit to help it reach a decision on Representative Hebert's bill to set up a District clinic for treating alcoholism as a disease, not a crime.

McMahon is witness.

Judge McMahon issued his invitation from the witness chair in the windup of the subcommittee's third session on the clinic bill. The hearing will continue at 10:30 a. m. today in Room 445, Old House Office Building.

Judge Backing Clinic's Need Invites Group to View Drunks

McMahon endorsed the purpose of the bill, saying a clinic was badly needed, but he left details of the measure as confused.

Milton S. Kronheim, Washington liquor wholesaler, also criticized the bill as confused.

Kronheim said there was no proof of the suggestion in the bill "that the abusive use of alcoholic beverages is reflected in accident rates, decreased personal efficiency, absenteeism and the amount of seriousness of crime in the District."

He said the bill "leaves out those persons who, to my mind, are chronic alcoholics—I mean those who drink 'smoke' and 'anti-freeze', 14 of whom have died in the community since the first of the year, two of them in a District penal institution."

He protested putting the clinic in the Department of Corrections, instead of in a health or welfare agency.

Kronheim said he opposed Hebert's plan for a special tax of 1 to 3 per cent on gross retail liquor sales in the District to finance the proposed clinic.

Learning 'Cello Offers Antidote Inversion Saves Choking Boy

Schenectady, N. Y., U.P.—A weekly 'cello lesson is the method a 47-year-old Union College professor has adopted to "keep from getting old and stale."

But the biggest payoff is a by-product of learning to play the instrument, says Dr. Orin J. Farrell.

"It makes me more sympathetic with students who find the learning of math difficult."

The Outlook Is Grim

By Barnet Nover

THE AMERICAN delegation is leaving for the Moscow conference of the Big Four foreign ministers in a mood that can only be described as grim.

General Marshall and his colleagues realize fully that they have an extremely difficult job ahead of them.

It took 15 months of bitter wrangling between Russia and the Western powers before agreement was reached on the peace treaties with Italy and the minor Axis satellites. Under the best of circumstances, it would not be easy to reach an agreement on the far more complicated and explosive German problem.

As it happens, the present state of the world is not such as to encourage any measure of optimism regarding the relations between Russia and the west.

U. S. Assured Training Law, Andrews Says

By the Associated Press

Chairman Andrews (R., N.Y.) of the House Armed Services Committee asserted yesterday that "the American people are going to take some form of universal (military) training."

"We will get something, even if it's two, four or six months (of training)," he said in an address to the Adjutants General Association of the United States.

President Truman, who has declared for the principle of universal training, has a commission studying problems of carrying it out and is withholding detailed recommendations to Congress until it reports, probably in two or three months. In turn, Congress is withholding consideration of the question until it gets Mr. Truman's proposals.

Other speakers at the adjutants general meeting were Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Army Chief of Staff, and Representative Towse (R., N.Y.).

Towse told the National Guard organization that "our probable enemy, if we have one, would like nothing better than to see our economic machinery knocked to hell."

Then, without identifying the "probable enemy," he said it had succeeded "to some extent in the attempt during the last 10 years."

Eisenhower, who talked to a closed session, told reporters he discussed "general National Guard matters." He declined to give further details.

However, Towse began his speech by saying:

"As Eisenhower told you, the important basis of our security is economic security in this country."

Towse then discussed the "possible enemy" and said that the Army and Navy must be kept strong to protect domestic security "when the time comes."

Bankers Lose Grip On Housing Reform

Chicago, U.P.—Fewer businessmen and more professional men, wage earners and labor officials are being selected to operate housing program in the Nation's cities, the National Association of Housing Officials reports.

A survey by the association showed that only 45 per cent of the Nation's 2033 local housing authority commissioners were bankers, businessmen or industrialists last year, as compared with 54 per cent in 1945. At the same time, the proportion of professional men and women rose from 20 to 22 per cent, while wage earners and labor officials rose from 10 to 15 per cent.

Disease's Link Marine Guard With Pollution Balks Pickets

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.

Frederick, Md., Feb. 28.—The link between medical research and stream pollution control was emphasized here today by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, assistant health officer for the District of Columbia.

Speaking at the quarterly meeting of the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin, Dr. Seckinger said recent research has disclosed the possibility that "depleted" soil is responsible for nutritional deficiency diseases.

He said one prominent researcher has a promising theory, not yet accepted by the medical profession, that catarrhs of the eye are caused by the victim's diet of food grown in depleted soil, food which cannot gain from the soil a certain essential "something."

Dr. Seckinger, one of the District's three members of the commission, declared that such developments should be a concern of the commission because soil erosion, pollution control, medical research and reforestation "go hand in hand."

Illinois Busmen Strike

Springfield Ill., Feb. 28.—Bus drivers struck today, crippling public transportation in this State capital city of 75,000.

The strike began unexpectedly at midday, leaving thousands of workers with no means of getting home, except by walking.

The drivers, members of Local 1249 of the AFL Bus Drivers' Union, walked off the job after the Springfield Transportation Co. refused to acknowledge an arbitration award in the drivers' favor.

The union had demanded a 20-cent hourly wage increase, from 97 cents an hour to $1.17, and a $50 a month retirement pension. The issue was submitted to a three-man arbitration panel, which ruled in favor of the drivers.

The company claimed the decision was invalid on ground that the board ruled on "issues not stipulated as part of the arbitration."

Buffalo Teachers Still Out

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 28.—The striking Buffalo Teachers Federation today rejected as "highly unsatisfactory" the State recommended augmented salary schedule for all teachers.

Thus the prospects of an early settlement of the five-day-old walk-out, the largest teachers strike in the Nation's history, faded as the federation once again tossed responsibility for meeting its demands for higher pay to the city administration.

Raymond J. Ast, president of the federation which has led the city's 3,000 teachers and halted classes for 71,000 public school pupils, said in a formal statement:

"Our study of the report (of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's Committee on Education) indicates that it is highly unsatisfactory, that it does not offer the long-promised relief, that it is not intended to take effect in the form of permanent salary legislation until July 1948."

Pupils Walk Out

Mount Clemens, Mich., Feb. 28.—An estimated 1250 pupils of Mount Clemens High School, championing the cause of their quoted principal, went on strike today despite his attempt to halt them.

The principal, 56-year-old Monte McFarlane, coaxed demonstrating students into a mass meeting in the one million dollar high school but his impassioned plea for their return to classes proved futile.

Ten student leaders of the demonstration exhorted pupils to "remain away from the school" against the school board's failure to rehire McFarlane.

Maid to Tell of Bank Wrappers Found in Ex-Judge's Home

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 28.—Donald Reinsnyder, attorney for Trustee Michael, a few days earlier in April of 1942.

Part of the money given Donald Johnson, Hammack told a jury of nine men and three women, came from $3000 in cash "in six bundles of $500 each" obtained by cashing a check at the Catawissa Bank.

He said the Government will prove that Reinsnyder, a deceased Scranton, Pa., attorney, previously had told Michael that Donald M. Johnson, a co-defendant with his father, "has got to be taken care of" in connection with the reorganization of the Central Forging Co.

The Government opened its case after Hammack insisted defense lawyers "control" the verbal outpourings of their clients as tension gripped the opening of the trial by the former Federal judge.

Dallas Businessmen Pedal Auto Fast

Dallas, Tex., U.P.—Puffing Dallas businessmen pedaled a bicycle 2415 miles last year, although the machine never left its parking standard in the YMCA's health club.

Club Director Harry Tell, who, in addition to taking excess weight of Dallasites, indulges in statistical gymnastics, says the machine melted 7 tons of fat off the frames of overfed Texans.

The spinning wheels of the "torture device" turned no enough revolutions to have made a trip from Dallas to Seattle, providing anyone wanted to leave Texas.

Thieves Use Hearse

Houston, Tex., U.P.—Deputy Sheriff Don Martindale reported burglars used a hearse to haul 14 cases of whisky from a liquor store.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 28.—At this point Buddy Lewis is an honest-to-goodness holdout for better wages before he joins the Washington club, and rarely has a ballplayer been in a better bargaining position. Eventually, he probably will report to the Nats, but at a better salary than they are offering him.

There's a $1500 difference between Lewis' demands and what Griffith has offered. The club's proposition gave Lewis a $1000 raise over his $14,000 salary of 1946, but the outfielder has scorned that modest tilt in his salary. Obviously, he has been reading the papers and has learned that a $14,000 salary is no longer among the high brackets in big league baseball.

If he saw the admission by the Yankees the other day that their payroll totaled $252,000 and that Yankee ballplayers were thus averaging $13,120, Lewis had reason to feel mistreated. He rates himself better than an average ballplayer on the Yankees. Clark Griffith, who doesn't like Larry MacPhail anyway, now likes him even less for publicizing the down-the-line salaries of the Yankees which puts other club owners on the spot.

POVICH

LEWIS COULD be a tough nut for Griffith to crack. Lewis is in the rare advantage of being independent of his baseball wages. He operates a thriving automobile agency in his native Gastonia, N. C., and has farm interests and a bowling alley from which he draws income. He isn't the usual baseball holdout, whom a club owner can crack down on.

It was significant today when Griffith failed to take an emphatic stand against Lewis' salary demands. In other cases when his ballplayers have failed to report, the Nats' owner has gotten tough and announced they would be fined when they did show up. But in Lewis' case, he has been reluctant thus far to crack down.

Asked if Lewis would be fined, Griffith said, "Oh, I don't know. I could fine him 'or reporting late if he shows up, but I haven't thought about that yet." All he would say was that Lewis, if he reported late, would not be put on the payroll until he attained playing condition. That was an empty threat, inasmuch as Lewis is rarely out of shape and would be in condition in a couple of weeks.

THE LEWIS HOLDOUT is a case where the club has more to lose than the ballplayer. Lewis represents at least a $75,000 chattel on the ballplayers' market, and if he persists in refusing to join the club Griffith would be at least that much out of his pocket. Lewis represents trading material for which the Nats could get a third baseman or a shortstop. Griffith isn't going to brush him off easily, and will probably offer a compromise salary.

Lewis is a peculiar asset to the Washington club, however. He batted only .292 last season, which may not be a fancy figure, but it tied Stan Spence for hitting leadership among the outfielders. And Lewis, due to the fact that he is a left-handed hitter, is not bothered particularly by the left-handed pitching the Nats are always called on to face because of their plethora of southpaw swingers.

The long-shot probability is that Griffith might eventually get tough with Lewis and refuse to treat any more with him. The Nats' owner doesn't like holdouts, and is reluctant to set an example of capitulation to their demands. Before permitting Lewis to set the style for future holdouts, Griffith may be prepared to let him last the season out in Gastonia.

THE SUSPICION IS, however, that Lewis is playing for time, as well as whatever salary boost he can wrangle from Griffith. His present holdout tactics may be just a maneuver by the outfielder to stay away from spring training and thus put in his time more profitably among his Gastonia enterprises.

Paradox of the situation is that Lewis is genuinely fond of Griffith and is one of the club owner's favorite ballplayers. Lewis, who had 354 missions over the hump in India, named his transport plane the "Old Fox" in tribute to the Washington club owner. And the framed picture of Lewis as an Army flier decorates Griffith's desk in Washington.

Lewis has one more mission in mind at this time. It's to get over the $15,000 hump, and he'll probably make it.

Jury Hits 'Criminal Element' As Danger to Boxing Integrity

New York, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—A grand jury concluding a long investigation of the fight game today reported that evidence received "points conclusively to the existence of conditions and abuses which jeopardize the integrity of boxing."

Certain underworld characters, who cannot operate openly because of criminal records, are operating behind legitimate, licensed managers of boxers and "are recognized... as virtually indispensable" in boxing, the jury said.

"These underworld characters are recognized throughout the sport of professional boxing as virtually indispensable 'contact men,' and certain licensed matchmakers, who control the making of boxing matches, continually and knowingly deal with them in arranging professional prize fights," the grand jury report added.

"The malign influence if this criminal element is aptly illustrated by testimony before us that a licensed manager seeking an important bout for a prominent boxer under contract to him was informed by a member of the underworld that the match could be arranged only upon condition that the boxer 'do business'—that is, agree in advance to lose."

Promoters accepted the fighters' picture in violation of the State Athletic Commission and have deducted "unwarranted items of expense," the report continued. Managers have retained "as much as 50 per cent of the purses in violation of the SAC's rule limiting managers' shares to a maximum of 33 1/3 per cent."

The jury recommended that all applicants for licenses be fingerprinted and that unlicensed participation in boxing be prosecuted. It also said the law should be amended to require promoters and managers to declare under oath a statement of all money received and paid.

400 Swimmers Vie In Recreation Meet

The District Recreation Department's annual swimming meet is scheduled this morning from 9:30 a. m. to 1 p. m. in the Ambassador Hotel pool. Four hundred contestants are entered.

Kongsgaard Wins

Ishpeming, Mich., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Arnold Kongsgaard, one of Norway's top ranking ski jumpers, leaped 239 and 230 feet off Suicide Hill today to outdistance the rest of the field and virtually clinch the national ski jumping championship in the forty-third annual United States tournament.

Tech Riflemen Win

McKinley Tech's riflemen defeated Wilson yesterday, 1262 to 1103, at the Tech range. John Grunbar was high gun for Tech with a 263, while Claude Petrone with 256, George Washington with 255 and Doug Tritipoe with 248 all shot higher than the top Wilson marksmen.

Nats Look To Lyons for Big Things

By Shirley Povich

Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 28.—The Washington second baseman for the next several seasons will be a rookie, now 22, who bats right handed, is full of dash, answers to the name of Eddie Lyons and can sting a baseball—Manager Ossie Bluege hopes.

Young Lyons holds the partial answer to the Nats' quest for more right-handed hitting power, Bluege believes. The Washington manager has been enthusiastic about the manner in which Lyons has been whaling batting practice pitching and is giving him a full shot at the second base job.

Normally, Bluege might prefer the veteran George Myatt, who is more seasoned in the ways of playing second base, but Myatt's handicap is the fact that he is another left-handed hitter on a club that already boasts too many southpaw swingers.

Knows the Job

With the transfer of Gerry Priddy to shortstop in an effort to plug 'that hole in the Nats infield, Bluege is gambling that Lyons will give him second-base protection. Lyons played second in the minors adequately enough, Bluege points out.

"If Priddy doesn't like it at shortstop and we have to move him back to second, then I'll give Lyons a try at third base," said Bluege today. "I'd like him in the line-up somewhere. We can use his hitting and the aggressive spirit he brings to our club."

This is Lyons' third trip to the Nats camp. Last year he was defeated by the presence of Priddy at second base, and applied for the job at third, but Bluege had other candidates for that position. This season, however, Lyons is directly in line for the second-base job.

Still No Lewis

The Nats squad reached full strength except for the absence of holdout Buddy Lewis today. Outfielders Joe Grace and Earl Wooten checked in from their respective Illinois and South Carolina homes, and will join the squad in training tomorrow.

The training session scheduled for today was a total flop... With rain threatening in the morning, Bluege scheduled the workout for 12:30 p. m., and the players had scarcely taken the field in uniform when an afternoon-long downpour chased them back to the clubhouse.

Mickey Vernon, Stan Spence and Gil Coan, who have been lazing about until they were scheduled to report, will take their first workout tomorrow along with the other initiates, Joe Grace, Gerry Priddy, Gil Coan and Eddie Vest... There has been no word from Shortstop Gil Torres, who is supposedly toting with the idea of playing summer ball in Cuba or jumping to the Mexican League.

Back to the Salt Mines!

Chicago, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Leslie O'Connor, Judge Keneas Mountain Landis' former secretary and general manager of the Chicago White Sox, today revealed his policy on holdout rookies—ship 'em back where they came from.

The O'Connor theory came into the open when the Sox announced the shipment of outfielder Lloyd Christopher, a big hard hitting right hander, back to the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League. Christopher, who weighs 195 and is 6 feet 2 inches tall, batted Pacific Coast League pitching for a .304 average last season. He came up to the Sox with a slugger reputation, a hard hitter who gets distance.

Then he held out.

"We offered him more money than most ball players ever get in their first year," O'Connor said. "He's turned that down, and now he's going back to Los Angeles as soon as we can get waivers on him."

Trout Talks Fast

Lakeland, Fla., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Talkative Dixie Trout talked himself into a $25,000 contract with the Detroit Tigers today and immediately set about to earning it.

In fact, the robust Tiger right-hander who hurled 82 victories for Detroit in the last four seasons, did $5000 worth of talking during his four-day holdout siege.

Dixie drew down $28,000 last year while winning 17 games and losing 13. The Tigers offered him a contract for 1947 calling for only $20,000.

After agreeing to his pay in a telephone conversation with Evans in Detroit, Trout conferred with Manager Steve O'Neill and signed the paper.

Irish Get Williams Trophy Tonight

Chicago, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Unbeaten Notre Dame, ranked the country's top collegiate football team last fall in the Associated Press poll of sports writers, tomorrow night will receive the Dr. Henry L. Williams memorial football trophy, symbolic of the national championship.

The trophy, awarded since 1941 on the basis of the AP annual balloting, will be presented to Coach Frank Leahy and the Rev. John H. Murphy, Notre Dame vice president, by the University of Minnesota "M" club, sponsor of the award, between halves of the Notre Dame-Northwestern basketball game at the Chicago stadium.

Kids Will See Movies

Motion pictures of the 1946 World Series and a film showing the techniques of the leading stars of the diamond will be shown to 800 youngsters today at the Department of Commerce Auditorium, 14th and E. st. n.w., under the sponsorship of WDCD and Tony Wakeman.

Conduct Attacked CYO Takes Dim View Of Durocher

NEW YORK, FEB. 28 (U.P.).—

The Catholic Youth Organization today withdrew its huge membership from the Brooklyn Dodger Knott Club in a direct rebuke to Manager Leo Durocher.

Durocher was denounced for his conduct "both on and off" the baseball field, as a potential 125,000 young fans withdrew from the Knott Club organization which sponsors Dodger enthusiasm.

The Catholic Youth Organization stated that Durocher was "undermining the moral and spiritual training of our young boys," and the Rev. Vincent J. Powell, director of the CYO's Brooklyn diocese, resigned as a member of the Knott Club's board of directors.

No direct reference was made to Durocher's recent marital problems with Laraine Day, the movie actress, but this was regarded as the cause of the action against the boisterous Dodger manager.

In a letter of resignation to the head of the Knott Club, Father Powell said:

"The present manager of the Brooklyn Knott Club is not the kind of leader we want for our youth to idealize and imitate. Durocher has finally climaxed a long series of events both on and off the field.

"We cannot, therefore, continue to have our youngsters officially associated with a man who presents to them an example of complete contradiction of our moral teaching; to do so would be to betray the parents of these youngsters; to do so would be to default to the many priests of Brooklyn who have labored so long and so zealously in the training of Catholic young men; to do so would be to actually place these youngsters in the position where they would have to conclude that the CYO approved of Durocher's actions.

Hank Joins Pirates

Miami, Fla., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Big Hank Greenberg arrived by plane today to join the Pittsburgh Pirates for his first seasonal workout.

Greenberg said the trip here in the private plane of John Galbreath, club treasurer, was delayed an hour by rough flying.

A big crowd met him at the airport.

"I'll be on the grounds for a workout in the morning," said Greenberg.

Purdue Names Stu Holcomb Grid Mentor

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 28 (U.P.).—

Stuart K. Holcomb, an assistant take over in March as football Army coach at West Point, will coach at Purdue University in a try to bring the Boilermakers back to the top of the Big Nine football.

Holcomb signed a five-year contract last night and left immediately to rejoin the Army basketball team at Annapolis. He is head basketball coach.

He succeeds Cecil Isbell, former Purdue and professional grid star who resigned to coach the Baltimore Colts professional team of the All-America Conference.

Isbell's salary was not announced. Isbell's salary at Purdue was reported to have been about $8500 annually.

The 36-year-old Army assistant will come to Purdue with football at a low point at the big engineering school.

Isbell's Boilermakers, plagued by injuries, were able to win only two games last season, and they were forced into overtime in which they were defeated by the Ohio State and they lost all other league games.

Guy (Red) Mackey, Purdue athletic director, said today Holcomb could name his own staff. He was chosen by a faculty committee after a wide search.

Assigned to West Point

Holcomb was assigned to West Point when he entered the Army in 1944.

After graduating from Ohio State, where he was in the backfield with that school's new coach, Wesley Fesler, Holcomb went to Findlay (Ohio) College in 1931.

In four years, his team won two Northwestern Ohio Conference titles.

During the five following years he coached at Muskingum (Ohio) College, winning the conference title.

At Washington and Jefferson, he won the district title his only year there and he came back to Ohio in 1942 as head coach at Miami University. His team in 1943 surprised Indiana with a 7-7 tie.

Holcomb turned down an offer to become coach at Washington University, St. Louis, to take the Purdue job. He had had a verbal agreement with Washington, which released him to take the more attractive offer.

Eagles' Executive Post to Al Ennis

Philadelphia, Feb. 28 (U.P.).—Al Ennis, public relations director of the Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League, has been appointed general manager of the Eagles, it was announced today.

Ennis succeeds Harry Thayer who resigned his general manager ship of the team. Ennis, 49, is a native of Savannah, Ga., but now lives in New York City. He is a former professional tennis player and coach, professional basketball player and a water polo player.

Little Hoyas Triumph

With Andy Bowie's 22 points leading the attack, Georgetown Prep's Little Hoyas nosed out the favored London Brown Bears, 43 to 41, yesterday at Georgetown Prep.

The game was closely contested all the way, with neither team enjoying more than a three-point lead. The Little Hoyas were on top all through the second half though.

Tom Manfuso and Don Amussen were high scorers for London with 15 and 13 points. The win was the ninth against 10 losses for the Little Hoyas. It was the fifth loss in 16 games for London.

Virginia Roundup

WAYNESBORO.—An all-military shoulder-to-shoulder rifle match will be fired on the Fishburne Military School Range here this afternoon with six schools competing. They are Fishburne, Staunton, Augusta, Hargrave and Fork Union Military Academies and Randolph-Macon Academy.

Fishburne enters the tourney undefeated in shoulder-to-shoulder matches this year. While firing in the William Randolph Hearst Match, Fishburne scored 923 out of a possible 1000. National championship was won with a 924 score last year.

WAYNESBORO.—Four high school basketball teams, Staunton, Harrisonburg and Covington, are entered in the Group II, District 5, basketball tourney to be held at Virginia Military Institute, Lexington, today to select the Valley District champions.

CHARLOTTEVILLE.—The University of Virginia varsity club and department of athletics will fete the State high school football champion Grays Comets today at a banquet ceremony.

SHEPHERDSTOWN, W. Va.—A strong last-period rally enabled Shippensburg (Pa.) Teachers College to take a 49-39 basketball decision over Shepherd College here in a rough game.

A near-capacity crowd saw the locals fight back to overcome a first-period deficit and lead 23-21 at halftime.

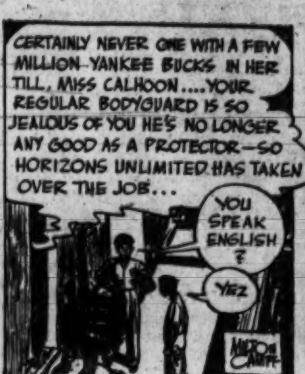

Lanky 6 ft. 7-in. Jeb Stuart of the visitors was too much for the locals, and turned in 17 points to lead both teams in scoring.

BERKELEY SPRINGS, W. Va.—Sweeping a series for the second night in succession, Berkeley Springs High basketball boys trampled Capon Bridge (W. Va.) High here, 50-17. The local reserves were used almost entirely for the second half.

STREET SCENE

He was nicely dressed, and plodded along against the wind, head down and chin buried on his wishbone.

A sudden gust caught his hat and sailed it into a nearby slush pile. But the man continued on his way, without so much as glancing at his lid.

A startled passerby called out, "Hey, mister, there's your hat."

But the bareheaded one kept right on going.

"I know," he muttered. "I was tired of it anyhow."

MISCELLANY

All singers and lovers of Gospel songs are invited to join the All States (nonsectarian) Gospel Singers every Tuesday night at the Open Door Church. You can get details from Everett North by calling Warfield 0780. James E. Hanley, of 4009 7th st. ne., is the latest former railroad to inform me that two-way radio can't be substituted for those train whistles that keep us awake at night. Hanley, who is now assistant chief of telegraph and cables at RFC, says that he once memorized 365 different railroad rules. Restaurant men say they're taking in more pennies and single-dollar bills than they used to, and that this is a sure sign that business is falling off. The news vendor at 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., startles passerby by growling, "Get out of town." When the pedestrian wheels to investigate, the newsboy innocently adds: "...papers."

ORDER IN THE COURT

At Wednesday's session of Colonel Durant's court-martial, the prosecution was trying to establish that a witness had seen Mrs. Durant wearing many costly jewels.

The prosecutor said: "Tell us if you saw Mrs. Durant wearing anything." But before the witness could answer, the defense objected, because "the question assumed a fact which was not in evidence."

"What fact is not in evidence?" asked the court.

"The fact that she was wearing anything," replied the defense.

The trial was resumed after the laughter subsided.

1. You are South and hold these cards:

♠ J 8 6
♥ 10 9
♦ A 8 6 3
♣ 10 7 5 2

The bidding has gone:

North East South West
1 ♠ Pass 1 NT Pass
3 ♠ Pass ?

What call do you make?

2. You are declarer of today's four-spade contract. West opens five of hearts. East puts on king. How do you play?

Answers to Quiz

1. North's jump in new suit forces South to bid again. His best is three spades. He prefers spades to five diamonds, one trick more. There is no point to a three-trump rebid, as North must have a two-suiter, else he would have bid three no trump himself. Three spades, including jack are adequate trump support.

Opening lead: 5 ♥

2. South wins four-spade contract by holding up on opening lead. He sees that if diamond finesse is right he can avoid a heart discard, winning first trick and later discarding heart ten on one of dummy's long diamonds. But if East holds diamond king and ace of clubs, he will be defeated by taking the first trick.

East's play of heart king places partner with queen. Therefore, if South wins heart ace and later takes diamond finesse, East will win king, put West in with the heart queen and take two club tricks on a lead through dummy's club king. Declarer will go down one trick, losing diamond, heart and two clubs.

But when South lets East's heart king win opening lead, contract is safe. He wins return lead, draws trumps, takes diamond finesse. East wins king but has no way to put West in for club lead-through. South makes four spades, taking heart, five spades, four diamonds.

And when the wire finally got to WWDC, it was discovered that the sender had failed to give his address.

DO TURTLES BITE?

Theresa Gettings, of 1705 Pennsylvania ave. nw., reports this one:

At the Potomac Park stop the other night, a bobby-soxer tripped over a safety zone "turtle," and the starter called out, "Careful, there. Watch out for the turtle."

"I'm sorry," replied the bobby-soxer as she boarded her car. "Did I hurt him?"

THE GENTLER SEX

Six large women, clad in fur coats, boarded a Walkers Chapel bus one night this week, and immediately established a redoubt near the front of the vehicle. Several found seats, and the remainder stood up near their friends.

The aisle was thereby effectively blocked, and nobody could get past the ladies to the rear of the bus.

The driver pleaded, stranded passengers pushed and argued, but it was all to no avail. The ladies stood their ground.

By the time the bus got to Rosslyn, where it changed drivers, many harsh words had been passed, and the new driver got a complete report of what had happened.

So he announced in a loud, firm voice that the bus would not move until the ladies did—and thereupon a war of nerves developed.

After a 45-minute delay, the driver capitulated. He continued on his route, with the triumphant behemoths still blocking the aisle.

I Loved You Once

I loved you once with all my heart . . . When life was young and sweet . . . And in that time of happiness . . . I worshipped at your feet . . . I wanted you in every thought . . . And every dream I had . . . And when I saw you smile at me . . . I never could be sad . . . But circumstances drew you about . . . And as I often feared . . . The clouds all came together and . . . The sunshine disappeared . . . I gazed into your eyes but there . . . Was nothing more to say . . . And so we silently shook hands . . . And then you went away . . . I loved you once with all my heart . . . And that time I knew . . . Whatever else my life might hold . . . I would remember you.

Plan Games Ahead

Why does everyone have a marvelous time at Sally's parties, a dreary time at Jane's? Because Jane leaves you completely to your own devices, while Sally sees to it that there's always something doing. That's the secret of giving good parties!

Take out hostess insurance before your next party. Send for our Reader Service booklet No. 60. Has over 90 games of all types: ice-breakers, active and quiet games, romantic and children's games, magic and fortune-telling stunts.

Send 25c (coin) for "Games for Good Parties" to The Washington Post, Reader Service, 243 West 17th st., New York 11, N. Y. Print name, address, booklet title and No. 60.

Other Reader Service booklets available for 25c each are No. 90—"Beauty and Health Through Simple Exercises" and No. 202—

THERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message or two each day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune.

To play, first select a number from 1 to 9. If the number of letters in your name is more than 9, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the grid below and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. To read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

OF ALL THINGS!

OPEN THAT DOOR—Yes, and perhaps with a crystal doorknob with snowflakes dancing inside. That's what I find at the home of Max P. August. Mr. August's usual collection of paper weights had become so large, that it was a problem where to display all the lovely, but his ingenuity asserted itself, and he made some of them into doorknobs. That's combining beauty with utility, plus supplying a topic of conversation when there are callers.

NOT SO—Karen Marsh, age 4½ years, goes to Euclid Nursery School. She loves her teacher, dearly, and in child fashion likes to imitate her, but one of Karen's pals didn't like it when Karen decided to "play" teacher. When questioned by her mother how the other little girls liked her self-appointed role, Karen replied, "I got slapped." Karen isn't playing teacher anymore.

TO EACH HIS OWN—Homes in the Orient have special fine rugs reserved for guests, just as special towels are reserved for guests in our homes. The special rugs are spread before the fire upon the arrival of guests. And in some sections of the Orient a bride is presented a bath rug on her wedding day.

Your Questions On Homemaking

Is it possible to make up a gray stain for wood? We have two unpainted chests which we wish to stain gray but all commercial stains seem to be regulation ones.

There are two ways to do this. Thin flat gray paint with turpentine until it is the consistency of regular stains. The number of coats will depend upon the depth of color you desire.

Or mix raw umber, gray or white flat paint and turpentine to the proper consistency and apply as a stain.

I have an avocado plant, started from seed, that is now 10 inches high. Can you tell me how it should be transplanted? How can granulated sugar that has become hard be softened? If stored in the refrigerator, should it be in an air-tight container? Our new refrigerator arrived with the door held closed by adhesive tape and when the tape was removed it left a yellow stain. Is there any way I can remove this stain?

Transplant the avocado plant in dirt, either in a large pot or box or outdoors, just as you would any other type of plant. Wait until warm weather if the plant is to go outside.

Sugar may be softened by pounding it with a blunt object or rolling with a rolling pin. If you can wait a few days put it, uncovered, in the refrigerator. Only when the sugar has softened should it be placed in an air-tight container to retain moisture. Put a slice of apple or a piece of fresh bread in the container to supply moisture. If you really

B. S. Grewal Leaves For Detroit Today

B. S. Grewal, who came to Washington from Detroit for the reception given Wednesday by the National Committee for India's Freedom in honor of the new Indian Ambassador, Asaf Ali, will return to Detroit today.

Mr. Grewal's visit here had a twofold purpose—to meet the new Ambassador and also to see an old friend, Senator Elbert Thomas, who had been his professor in history at the University of Utah. Senator and Mrs. Thomas were guests at the reception.

Olivier Is Presenting His Script of 'Henry V' To the Folger Library

THE AUTOGRAPHED "shooting script" used by Producer-Director Laurence Olivier in filming Shakespeare's "Henry V," on Monday afternoon will be presented to the Folger Shakespeare Library as a gift of the British government.

The presentation will be made at Folger, 201 E. Capitol st., at 3 p. m., by Sir John Balfour, First Minister of the British Embassy, with Director James G. McManaway accepting on behalf of the library.

Flown from England, the script has been inscribed in typical fashion: "To the Folger Shakespeare Library, the respectful wishes of its humble servant, L. Olivier."

The screen play of the magnificent Technicolor film, distributed in this country under the auspices of The Theater Guild-United Artists Corp., together with a complete set of production "stills," will be incorporated into the library's permanent collection of outstanding Shakespearean editions.

In the exchange of international amenities, the Folger Shakespeare Library thus places itself on a parity, so to speak, with the Library of Congress, to which with comparable ceremonies George Bernard Shaw not so long ago presented the original draft of his "Pygmalion."

Whatever else it may or may not have done, "The Perfect Marriage," currently costarring Loretta Young and David Niven at Loew's Capitol, has inspired a contest that offers prizes worth winning. Those covetous of a trip to New York in a TWA plane, a week in a suite at the Hotel St. Moritz, overlooking Central Park; seven full-filled days as the guests of Movie Story Magazine, in cooperation with Paramount Pictures and Loew's Capitol, now have a chance to satisfy their longing practically free, gratis, for nothing. Night club dates, theater tickets, sightseeing, radio shows, "the works" at Helena Rubinstein's Fifth ave. salon! All this, and with a guest of your own choosing, is only the first prize. Second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth prizes, respectively, will be $750, $500, $250, $100 and $50, with 10 additional prizes of $10 each, all in cash. Awards will be made for the best statements, not to exceed 300 words, written on the official entry blanks which will be available at the Capitol Theater early next week. Subject of these statements must be the contestants' ideas of what makes a marriage perfect. Each statement must start: "The Perfect Marriage is . . . These statements must be submitted to 'The Perfect Marriage' Contest, care of Loew's Capitol Theater. Anybody, man or woman, married or single, any age, is eligible to compete. First prize winner and guest will visit New York in April. So now you know.

Another de luxe neighborhood theater opening will be celebrated tonight, when the Fairlawn Amusement Co. throws open its new auditorium, located at Good Hope rd. and Minnesota ave. s. e. Designed by John and Drew Eberson and built by the Mohler Construction Co., the Anacostia has required more than a year to complete. It has a seating capacity of 1000, all on one floor, and embodies the finest appointments the market affords and full provision for comfort and enjoyment—Kroehler Push-Back seats, making it unnecessary for patrons to rise to permit others to pass; appropriately decorated nursery for the convenience of theater-minded mothers; luxurious lounges, etc., etc. The house will be open for inspection to night at 7:30, with the dedicatory performance scheduled to begin at 8, with music by Sidney's Mayflower Orchestra, Gene Archer, baritone, and Ginger Rogers, David Niven and Burgess Meredith in "The Magnificent Doll" the screen feature. The Anacostia will operate daily on a continuous basis from 1 p. m. to closing.

Today Is Kiddies' Day With a total of nine Warner Brothers theaters participating, the fourth series of Children's Film Library Saturday morning programs will be inaugurated in four of them today.

Under the new plan, which extends through August, each of the nine theaters will present one children's morning matinee each month. Today's theaters and features are as follows: Silver, "Five Little Peppers and How They Grew," featuring Edith Fellows; Uptown, Anne Shirley in "Anne of Windy Poplars"; Tivoli, "My Pal Wolf," with Sharyn Moffett; Penn, "The Prince and the Pauper," with the March Twins and Errol Flynn. All performances begin at 10 a. m., with a flat price of 25 cents for children and adults alike.
